NOTICE is hereby given that a By-Law was passed by the Council of the Municipal Corporation of the Township of Sheffield, in the County of Lennox and Addington, on the fourth day of September, A. D., 1911, providing for the issue of Debentures to the amount of $3500.00 for the purpose of purchasing for Public School Section No. 6, of the said Township of Sheffield, a new school site, and erecting thereon a new school house and furnishing the same according to law, and that such By-Law was registered in the Registry Office of the County of Lennox and Addington, on the fifth day of September, A. D., 1911.

DESERONTO ROAD.

Quite a heavy fall of snow visited this locality on Friday afternoon of last week, followed by a down pour of rain which lasted all night and Saturday morning the snow had about all disappeared leaving the roads in a rather muddy condition.

Mrs. Fred Bowen is at present a very sick woman being confined to her bed for the last ten or twelve days, and is under the care of Dr. Newton, of Deseronto.

Mr. McConkey who has been residing on Mr. Ezra Pringle's farm has moved to Napanee, and Mark Husband who has been renting Mrs. Conger's place on the Sand Hill has taken his place on the Pringle farm.

Mr. Austin Kimmerly, who has had a very successful season hauling milk to Mr. Gerow's factory, Palace Road, made his last trip for the season on Friday Nov. 17th.

Frank Frost has returned to this locality and is going to stop with Harry Oliver for the winter.

Mr. D. M. Kimmerly returned home Saturday evening, after spending several weeks away catching white fish.

Mr. William Cade who did most of the thrashing on this road this last fall, is again in our midst, presumably for buckwheat thrashing.

Brass Fern Pots, N. P. Teapots, and Perculators. Everything in Nickel-plated ware. BOYLE & SON.

GRATNA.

Duck hunting is the order of the day here. Some return with quite a few while others are not so successful. Mr. John Loyst returned home from his west last week.

Owing to the disagreeable weather Sunday, Nov. 12th. Temperance Sunday was observed in the Sunday School last Sunday, and about nine cents of the scholars signed the pledge.

Prayer meeting has re-opened for the winter months and is held every Wednesday evening.

A committee of the Laymen's Missionary movement here canvassed the neighborhood recently and report very liberal contributions. We hope our circuit will keep its record of last year it then being the Banner Circuit of the district in missionary giving.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Young, of Bowman River, Manitoba, arrived here on Sunday. They expect to take up their abode here for the future.

Mr. B. Redgwell has gone to Toronto for the winter.

Mr. H. Mellow and Mr. B. Edgar, visited at Mr. Alkenbrack's, Mt. Pleasant, Sunday.

Misses Laura Mellow and Jennie Perry have returned home after a pleasant visit with friends at Mt. Pleasant.

Debentures for Sale.

Township of Sheffield 5 per cent. Debentures for a Public School Loan for $3500.00 principal and interest payable in Sterling Bank of Canada, Toronto, in twenty yearly installments amounting to $280.85 each, on 20th December, beginning in 1912.

REDUCE THE TAXES AND HOW TO DO IT.

If we were to start out to-morrow to hunt for a citizen who would object to having his taxes reduced, it would be a pretty difficult job to find one. But it would not be any task to find one who wants his rate of taxation reduced.

During a municipal contest the aspirant who comes forward and says his object, if elected, will be to so assist in managing the affairs of the town that the rate will be reduced, is the man who receives the hearty support of all the electors.

We venture to say that nine out of ten of the gentlemen who make this assertion have a very meager idea of the task before them.

Let us for a moment take a look at the controllable expenditure of the town. By "controllable expenditure" we mean the amount of money the members of the council have to spend outside of fixed expenditure.

According to the estimated receipts for 1911, as presented to the council by the Finance Committee in May, the total amount was $37,512.47.

Out of this amount the following items have to be paid, and are what we call "fixed expenditure," and the members of the council have no alternative but to pay them:

The above separation of the tax on the assessable property of the town will give the citizens of Napanee a first-class idea of how their tax money is spent, and how much the members of the council really have the handling of. The figures under the "also controllable" heading might very easily, without much stretch of the imagination, be added to the "uncontrollable expenditure", and deducting the amount, the council spend exactly $8215.95.
Now, let us have a look at the amounts given to the several committees, and see if there is a possible chance of a curtailment. The streets have and $3500. With all the much needed cement walks and sewer, to say nothing of the repairing of roads and old walks, who is there among us who will have the nerve to say they have one cent too much.
The Fire, Water and Light have $400 over and above the fixed expenditure of this department. Anyone who is conversant with the needs of fire department, etc., will know that to keep this department up to an efficient standard every cent will have to be carefully handled. And so on down the whole list of committees. Every committee has to exercise the most stringent economy if they are to show an even break at the end of the year.
Now, Mr. Citizen we are coming down to the object of this article.
There is not a tax payer in Napanee who would not like to have his taxes reduced.
The most recent question is how are we to do it.
We think the above explanation plainly shows that to hope for a tax reduction under present circumstances is simply impossible.
There is no use in beating about the bush, the whole sum and substance of the question is the town has got to grow. If the town were successful in securing a few thriving manufacturers it would grow by leaps and bounds, and in a few years Napanee would be known far and wide as one of the liveliest towns in this fair Province of ours. The question is how are we going to induce them to locate here.
There is one thing certain so long as the town jogs along as it is now, so long will the growth remain stationary or recede. The people have got to get busy, elect a 1912 council of hustlers, appoint an Industrial commission, advertise the fact that the town is willing to offer exceptionally good inducements to manufacturers to locate here, and we think we are not dreaming when we say good results are bound to follow.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier achieved his twentieth milestone on Monday, and the membership of the greatest opposition which Canada has ever seen, tendered him, on Wednesday evening, a dinner in recognition of the event.

The labor men of Toronto are down on the Borden government for withdrawing the case against T. D. Murrav, late manager of the Toronto Carpet company, for the importation of labor from England, under false pretences.

The death of Peter Schutz occurred in the Kingston general hospital, on Sunday. He for some time had been in the House of Industry, and had been taken to the hospital suffering from a stroke. His remains were taken to Odessa, by his nephew, for burial.

The city of Kingston carried their hotel by-law by a vote of 1448 for, and 297 against. The city guarantees the issue of $100,000 of bonds to promote the erection of an $180,000 hotel on King street. Monday evening the city council gave the by-law its third reading, and it will now be passed on to the Ontario legislature to be ratified.

James Thompson met with a painful accident in Newburgh and has been confined to the house. He was assisting to tear down an old barn when the timbers on which he was standing gave way and let him fall about fifteen feet. Both legs were very badly strained.

A terrible tragedy is reported from Ramoth, B. I., when two men and two girls met their death in a cave. They were overtaken by the storm on their way and were frozen to death. They were John Keefer, his two nieces, aged fourteen and eleven, and J. A. Tronson, a brother-in-law.

N. W. ROWELL, K. C.

Addressed a Big Meeting in the Opera House on Wednesday.

The Liberal Leader Accorded
A Warm Welcome.

At the Opera House on Wednesday the Liberal leader, Mr. N. W. Rowell, K. C., and the Liberal candidate, Mr. M. S. Madole were accorded a splendid reception. The Opera House was well filled and the telling arguments advanced by the speakers met with an unusually hearty reception. Mr. H. B. Sherwood, president of the association opened the meeting with a short address and introduced the Liberal candidate, Mr. M. S. Madole. Mr. Madole gave a brief review of the questions of the present campaign paying particular attention to the educational matters in which he is particularly well versed. Out of 130 schools in this county, a hundred of them are being taught by teachers without proper certificates, and though the trustees of the various school sections are paying largely increased salaries qualified teachers are unavailable. The trustees and ratepayers are not getting what they are paying for through the utter incompetency of the Government of Sir James Whitney to devise a school system which will supply the needed teachers. The bi-lingual schools were strongly condemned by Mr. Madole. He emphatically declared that he took the stand that the English language must be the language of Ontario. Mr. Madole also spoke strongly in favor of continuing the model schools so that the poor man's child shall have an opportunity of becoming a teacher without the necessary expense of attending a normal school and thus be enabled to secure a certificate to teach and after teaching a few years save enough money to attend Normal school should they so desire. In presenting himself as a candidate, Mr. Madole asked the support of all electors, no matter what their politics, so that the opposition may be so strengthened as to form a really effective check on a Government at present too strong to heed the voice of the people.

Mr. Rowell on rising to speak expressed his pleasure in being present to take part in the discussion of the issues of the present campaign and to meet the electors of Lennox. Mr. Rowell asked the electors of Lennox to send Mr. Madole to Toronto as a colleague who would prove a very useful one and reflect credit on the electors of Lennox. The country needs a stronger opposition.

The speaker briefly renewed the various matters of Government which come before the Legislature and the importance of sending the best possible representatives to that body.

Mr. Rowell compared the Liberal party to the remnants of New Ontario with the city of Kingston. He said that Ontario as a country looks upon New as a country to be to as a source of revenue for the province, not to be developed for the good of the settlers, but left as a mining and lumbering country. The Liberal party look

That it will be practically impossible to test the validity of the 'Ne Temere' decree before the privy council by the continuation of the famous Hebert-Closure case, was evidenced, when Hebert withdrew because he said he had no funds to carry the case further. He was unable to get guarantee expenses from organizations specially interested. This leaves the situation that this mixed marriage is legal under the law, but adjudged and held illegal by the Roman Catholic church.
The Kingston Whig of Monday says:—"An exciting time was experienced at Swift's wharf last Friday. When unloading the cargo which included a few head of live stock, a bull became frightened and jumped off the gang plank into the water. Considerable difficulty was experienced in getting the animal out of the water, as he floundered a great deal. At length he was pulled on a raft and a dozen men hauled him out. A bottle of whisky was procured and poured down his throat. He became so thoroughly chilled and exhausted from being in the water that whisky was the only thing which would have brought him around."
DESERONTO.
A meeting of the directors of the Match Factory, was held in town on Saturday, Nov. 11, when matters of importance were discussed. Following his a meeting of the share-holders was held last Saturday, when Mr. W. S. Morden, of Toronto, an energetic business man, was elected president, and Mr. C. J. Anderson was elected manager and secretary-treasurer. The president expressed great satisfaction with the showing made by the factory and with greatly increased facilities for turning out matches, the outlook for the future at the Dominion Match Factory is now better than it has yet been.
Mr. A. T. Snider, formerly of Deseronto, but more recently of Peterboro, Ont., has, with his family, returned to town and will occupy his residence on Dundas street, west.
Mrs. W. H. Mellow has returned from Kingston, where she has been under treatment by a specialist.
Among those who were presented to the Duke and Duchess of Connaught at their first drawing-room on Saturday evening last were Mrs. E. Walter Rathbun and Miss Marjorie Rathbun, of town. Mrs. E. Walter Rathbun was gown in a white crepe de chine with overdress of green chiffon with gold embroidery and court train of gold tulle with ruffle of tulle. Her ornaments were emeralds and diamonds and a bouquet of lilies of the valley. Miss Marjorie Rathbun's gown was of blue satin veiled with white chiffon, with a border of pink roses, court train of pink satin veiled with tulle and tulle drawn through small wreaths of pink rosebuds and forget-me-nots. Her ornaments were diamonds and pearls, and she carried pink roses.

... the remnants of New Ontario...
... of the city...
... Ontario as a country to be developed for the good of the settlers, but left as a mining and lumbering country. The Liberal party look upon it as a heritage to be so developed so as to benefit the whole Province. The Liberal policy is one of progress, of settlement of the vast acreage of farming lands there vacant while the Whitney Government merely collects all possible revenue, and cares nothing for settlers.
The Government does not appear to realize the importance of Agriculture, the basic occupation of Ontario. Mr. Rowell advocates demonstration farms and education for the young farmers to show them that they can do as well or better in Ontario as anywhere else and so keep our young men in the Province.
Mr. Rowell also advocated a Royal Commission to enquire closely into the whole question and suggest means whereby the ever constant drain of young men from the Province should be stopped. The administration of the school law and especially the government evasion of the bi-lingual school issue were strongly condemned by Mr. Rowell who pointed out the inconsistencies of the government in this respect. Civil service reform, another progressive plant of the Liberal platform was also dealt with at some length. "Take the civil service out of the patronage list and improve the service."
Mr. W. T. Gibbard closed the meeting with a short address heartily commending the platform outlined by Mr. Rowell and the stand on the school question and other issues taken by Mr. Madole. The meeting closed with cheers for Mr. Rowell, Mr. Madole and The King.

WHERE HE STANDS.
To the Editor:
I have been requested by a number of the Electors of this Riding, as a Candidate for the approaching Provincial Election, to state my position definitely on the question of Bi-lingual Schools in this Province and I therefore take this opportunity of reiterating what I stated at the Public Meeting in the Opera House in the Town of Napanee on the 22nd inst. that I am absolutely opposed to the teaching of any other than the English language in the Public Schools of this Province and if elected I will most strenuously oppose the continuation of teaching French in the Public Schools of Ontario. I believe that the teaching of French in our schools at the present time has largely been brought about by the appointment of Dr. Reaume to the position which he now holds in the Province and I feel most keenly the great danger which we would be exposed to by the continuation of the systems now in operation, and if elected, I will certainly use every effort to introduce legislation that will stamp out the fostering within our Province of other than the English language. I believe, the continuation of the present system will be most damaging to Separate Schools as well as Common Schools.
Yours truly,
M. S. MADOLE.

CLOSE QUARTERS;

OR, THE HOUSE IN THE
RUE BARBETTE

CHAPTER VII.

Brett was called at ten o'clock.
After reinvigorating himself with a bath and a hearty breakfast, he was ready to meet Captain Gaulttier, who arrived promptly at 11.30.
"Come to my room," said Brett.
"There we will be able to talk without interruption."

Once comfortably seated, Brett resumed the conversation where he had broken it off in the train overnight.

"You say you know Hussein-ul-Mulk," he commenced.

"Yes," replied the King's messenger, "and what is more, I have discovered his residence since we parted. It seems that one of the attaches at the Embassy met him recently and thought it advisable to keep in touch with the Young Turkish party, of which Hussein-ul-Mulk is a shining light. So he asked him where he lived, and as the result I have jotted down the address in my note-book." Gaultier searched through his memoranda, and speedily found what he wanted.

"Wait a minute," interrupted Brett. "Does it happen to be No.
11, Rue Barbette?"

The barrister had more than once surprised his companion during the previous night, but this time Gaulttier seemed to be more annoyed than startled.

"If you know all these things,"
he said stiffly, "I don't see why you should bother me to get you the information."

Brett smiled.

"You mean," he said, "that Hussein-ul-Mulk does live at No. 11
Rue Barbette?"

"Why, of course he does," was the irritable answer.

"That is very odd," said the barrister. "It was a mere guess on my part, I assure you."

His assurance evidently did not weigh much with Captain Gaultier, who replaced the note-book in his pocket and obviously cast about in his mind for a convenient excuse to take his departure.

Brett knew exactly what was troubling him.

"I am quite in earnest," he said,
"in telling you that I simply haz-arded a guess at the address. To prove that this is so, I must place you in possession of certain incidents which took place after we parted at the Gare du Nord."

Rapidly but succinctly he told the amazed King's messenger of the chase in the cab across Paris, and how he (Brett) had followed the Frenchman who was tracking Gault-tier's movements so closely.

"You will understand," he concluded, "that, in view of my preconceived theory, it was not a very far-fetched assumption to connect Hussein-ul-Mulk with the house in the Rue Barbette into which your spy vanished."

"Well," gasped his astonished hearer, "I must say, Mr. Brett, that I owe you an apology, but I have for the reason any movements."

Gaultier rapped loudly on the first door he encountered, and the summons appeared to scatter some of the inhabitants, judging by the rapid opening and closing of doors that preceded the appearance of an elderly and solemn-looking Turk, who cautiously demanded their business.

Gaultier sent in his card, and the servitor locked the door in the faces of the two men while he went to ascertain his master's orders.

"They evidently do not mean to take many risks," said the King's messenger in a low voice.

The door was re-opened, and the elderly Turk ushered them into a spacious room on the right of the entrance hall, where they were received by a young man—a tall, dignified Mohammedan, who rose hasty-ly from a chair, having apparently abandoned the perusal of a newspaper.

"Ah, mon brave Gaultier," he cried, "I am so pleased to see you.
I did not know you were in Paris.
I have been spending an idle moment over smoke and scandal." He spoke excellent French, and appeared to be quite at his ease, but Brett noticed that Hussein-ul-Mulk held the discarded newspaper upside down. He was smoking a cigarette, lighted the instant before their appearance, and notwithstanding his Oriental phlegm he seemed to be laboring under intense excitement.
Nevertheless, Hussein-ul-Mulk could control his nerves.

"Have you had dejeuner, or have you time to join me in a cigarette?"
he went on.

"We will be delighted," said
Gaultier, taking the proffered case.
"The fact is, I only heard of your presence in Paris by accident, and I mentioned the fact to my friend here, who has interested himself in the Armenian cause in London. He at once expressed a keen desire to make your acquaintance, so I ventured to bring him here and introduce him to you. This is Mr. Reginald Brett, an English barrister, and one who keenly sympathizes with the reform movement in Turkey."

"I am delighted to know you, Mr.
Brett," said the suave Oriental.

"It is a greater pleasure to me," Brett replied, "to find myself talking to a reformer so distinguished as you. Your name is well known in England. Indeed, in some quarters, it has come to be feared, which in this world is one of the signs of success."

Hussein-ul-Mulk was puzzled, but he remained outwardly unperturbed.

"I was not aware," he purred,
"that my poor services to my country were so appreciated by my English friends."

"Ah," said Brett, with a smile that conveyed much, "a man like you cannot long remain hidden. I have good reasons to think that at the present moment the most important movements are being made in the East."

Hussein-ul-Mulk became even more puzzled. Indeed, he exhibited in the Albert Gate incident." Again there was a breathless silence.

Hussein-ul-Mulk had regained his nerve. He was now considering how best he could dispose of this Englishman who knew so much. To purchase his silence was too hopeless. He must die as speedily and unostentatiously as possible. So he answered not, but thought hard as to ways and means.

Brett, in imminent danger of his life, disregarded all semblance of danger. He leaned back in his chair, closed his eyes in complete enjoyment of Hussein's cigarettes, which were really excellent, and said, in the even, matter-of-fact tones of one who discusses an abstract problem.

"Of course, my dear friend, you are thinking that the best answer you can give me is to strangle me or to shoot me, or adopt some other drastic remedy which finds favor in Constantinople. But let me point out to you that this will be a serious error of judgment. I have not come here without safeguarding my movements. You are aware that Captain Gaultier, a trusted Foreign Office messenger, brought me here in person. Some members of the British Government, and several important officials of Scotland Yard know that I am in your house and discussing this matter with you.

TOO LITTLE BLOOD.

The Cause of Nearly All the Everyday Ailments of Life.

Too little blood—that is what makes men and women look pale and sallow and feel languid. That is what makes them drag along, always tired, never real hungry, unable to digest their food, breathless and palpitating at the heart after slight exertion, so that it is wearisome even to go upstairs.
Doctors tell them that they are "anaemic"—the plain English being too little blood. If your face is pale or sallow, if your gums are pale instead of being scarlet, if you are easily tired and frequently despondent; if you do not relish your meals, and small matters irritate you, it is a sign that your blood is thin and watery and that you are on the verge of a complete breakdown.

More weak, anaemic people have been made strong, energetic and cheerful by taking Dr. Williams'
Pink Pills than by any other means.
They actually make new blood, which reaches every part of the body, braces the nerves and brings new health and new strength. The case of Miss Nellie Welch, Essex, Ont., is proof of the great curative powers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.
Miss Welch says: "A few years ago
I was going into what my friends believed to be a hopeless decline.
I was subject to severe headaches, had no appetite, was pale and grew dreadfully weak. I tried several doctors, some of whom we counted the best in this part of the country, but they failed to help me. At last my heart grew so weak and I was so nervous and thin that I had to take to my bed and the doctor held out but little hope for my recovery. Like others, I had often read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and though the doctor opposed my taking them I determined to try them. I felt a little better, and as well be dead as to be living in the misery I was in. In a month after

THE TEA PENALTY.

A Strong Man's Experience.

Writing from a busy railroad of the great roads says:

"My husband is a railroad man who has been so much benefited by the use of Postum that he wishes me to express his thanks to you for the good it has done him. His waking hours are taken up with his work, and he has no time to write himself.

"He has been a great tea drinker all his life and has always liked it strong.

"Tea has, of late years, acted on him like morphine does upon most people. At first it soothed him, but only for an hour or so, then it began to affect his nerves to such an extent that he could not sleep at night, and he would go to his work in the morning wretched and miserable from the loss of rest. This condition grew constantly worse, until his friends persuaded him, some four months ago, to quit tea and use Postum.

"At first he used Postum only for breakfast, but as he liked the taste of it, and it somehow seemed to do him good, he added it to his evening meal. Then, as he grew better, he began to drink it for his noon meal, and now he will drink nothing else at table.

"His condition is so wonderfully improved that he could not be hired to give up Postum and go back to tea. His nerves have become steady and reliable once more, and his sleep is easy, natural and refreshing.

"He owes all this to Postum, for he has taken no medicine and made no other change in his diet.

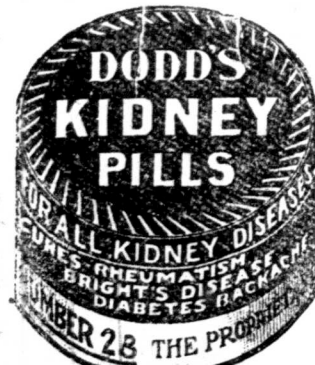

"His brother, who was very nervous from coffee-drinking, was persuaded by us to give up the coffee and use Postum, and he, also, has recovered his health and strength." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

the Rue Barbette into which your spy vanished."

"Well," gasped his astonished hearer, "I must say, Mr. Brett, that I owe you an apology, but I have for some reason any movements."

"I regard it as mere chance. I imagine that our fellow-passenger in the train caught the name of Hussein-ul-Mulk in our conversation and this decided him to shadow your movements, by means of the confederate who awaited his arrival at the station. As it happened, they simply hit upon the wrong person. It might have paid them much better to follow me. The outcome of the blunder is that I am in a fair way towards ascertaining all I want to know about them, whereas, up to the present, they do not even suspect my existence as an active agent in the affair."

"Well, now, in what way can I help you regarding Hussein-ul-Mulk?"

"Can you introduce me to him?"

"In what capacity?"

Brett reflected for a moment before replying.

"I might pose as a friend of yours interested in Turkish carpets, or coffee, or cigarettes, but for the purpose of my inquiry it would be well to jump preliminaries at once and make this chance acquaintance under the guise of a wire puller."

"All right," said Gaultier. "I don't see that it matters much to me, and the letter you have in your possession from the Under-Secretary is sufficient warrant for me to give you any assistance that lies in my power."

He glanced at his watch. "It is just about time for dejeuner," he continued. "What do you say if we drive to the Rue Barbette at once?"

The barrister assented, and they were soon crossing Paris with the superb disregard for other people's feelings that characterises the local cab-driver.

"By the way," inquired Gaultier, "have you learned anything else since your arrival?"

"Only this—it was not our friend Talbot who came here on Tuesday with a lady."

"You are sure?"

"Positive. I have compared the handwriting in the local register with a letter undoubtedly written by Mr. Talbot, and the two do not agree. The entry of 'Mr. and Mrs. Talbot, London,' in the visitors' book of the Grand Hotel, was a mere trick intended to amuse the police for a few hours until the conspirators had perfected their scheme for final and complete disappearance."

"It was a bold move."

"Very. Quite in keeping with the rest of the details of an uncommon crime."

At last the fiacre stopped in front of the house in the Rue Barbette which Brett had already scrutinized during the early hours of the morning.

"Here we are," said Gaultier with a laugh. "If we find Hussein-ul-Mulk at home I don't know what the deuce we are going to say to him."

"I think I will be able to interest him," said Brett calmly, and without further preliminary Gaultier, ascertained from the concierge that the Turkish gentleman was within.

The two men ascended to the second story.

that conveyed much, "a man like you cannot long remain hidden. I have good reasons to believe that at the present moment the Howards are earnestly producing a pure Hussin of the."

Hussin of the became even more puzzled. Indeed, he exhibited some slight tokens of alarm lest Brett's vehement admiration should reach the ears of others in the adjoining room.

"Really," he said, "you flatter me. Will you not try these cigarettes? They are the best; they are made from tobacco grown especially for the Sultan's household, and it is death to export them. I understand that the cigarette habit has grown very much of recent years in England?"

"Yes," said Brett, "it certainly has developed with amazing rapidity. In trade, as in politics, this is an astounding age."

Gaultier knew that there was more behind the apparent exchange of compliments than appeared on the surface. Having fulfilled his pledge to Brett, he said hurriedly, "Both of you gentlemen will understand that I cannot very well take part in a political discussion. With your permission, Hussein, I will now leave my friend with you for a half-hour's chat, as I have an appointment at the Cafe Riche."

Although Hussein was profoundly disconcerted by Brett's manner no less than his utterances, he could not well refuse to accord him a further audience, so Gaultier quitted the apartment and the Englishman and the Mussulman were left face to face.

Brett felt that the situation demanded a bold game. Under some circumstances he knew that to throw away the scabbard and dash with naked sword into the fray was the right policy.

"I came to see you, Hussein-ul-Mulk," he said, speaking deliberately, "not only because I have an interest in the progressive policy voiced by the Young Turkish party, but on account of matters of personal interest to you, and to friends of mine in England."

The Turk bowed silent recognition of the barrister's motives.

"You are aware," said Brett, "that a large number of valuable diamonds were stolen from the special Envoy of his Majesty the Sultan, in London, last Tuesday night, and that the theft was accompanied by the murder of four of the Sultan's subjects and the abduction of a prominent official in the British Foreign Office?"

For some few seconds Hussein-ul-Mulk strove hard to regain his composure and frame a reply, but Brett, nonchalantly puffing a cloud of smoke into the intervening space, and thus helping his hearer to control his emotions, went on—

"I do not propose wasting time by describing to you the details of a crime with which you are thoroughly acquainted. Let me say, in a sentence, that my chief, perhaps my only, motive in coming here to-day is to secure the release of my friend Mr. Talbot from the place where he is at present confined, and at the same time to obtain from you a statement which will satisfactorily clear Mr. Talbot in the eyes of his superiors of all personal com-

A Family Supply for 50c, Saving $2. The Sweetest, Quickest Remedy You Ever Used or Money Refunded.

A cough remedy that saves you $2, and is guaranteed to give quicker, better results than anything else, is surely worth trying. And one trial will show you why Pinex is used in more homes in the U.S. and Canada than any other cough remedy. You will be pleasantly surprised by the way it takes right hold of a cough, giving almost instant relief. It will usually stop the most obstinate, deep-seated cough in 24 hours, and is unequalled for prompt results in whooping cough.

A 30-cent bottle of Pinex, when mixed with home-made sugar syrup, makes sixteen ounces of the best cough remedy ever used. Easily prepared in five minutes—directions in package.

The taste is pleasant—children take it willingly. Stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative—both excellent features. Splendid for croup, hoarseness, asthma, bronchitis and other throat troubles, and a highly successful remedy for incipient lung troubles.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a 16-oz. bottle, and it is ready for use.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will gladly get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

OPINIONS DIFFER.

"At what age, doctor," asks the caller, "do women begin to notice the men?"

"Well," replied the great savant, "on that point there is a difference of opinion among the authorities. Some of them assert that the female child notices the opposite sex when one day old, while the rest claim she does not until she is at least forty-eight hours old."

The world doesn't ask how you got there after you arrive.

Do not let a cold settle on your lungs. Resort to Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup at the first intimation of irritation in the throat and prevent disease from lodging in the pulmonary organs. Neglected colds are the cause of untold suffering throughout the country, all of which could have been prevented by the application of this simple but powerful medicine. The price, 25 cents, brings it within the reach of all.

A WATCHMAKER'S TIP.

"Why do watches get dirty?" said the jeweller. "You'll find the answer in your watch-pocket. Turn it out."

The inquirer turned out his watch-pocket, sheepishly bringing forth a pinch of mud-colored dust, some lint, and a small ball of black fluff.

"There's the reason," said the jeweller. "Watches get dirty because the pockets they are carried in are never clean. A watch-pocket, my dear sir, should be cleaned out regularly once a week. Observe that rule, and your watch's works will not get clogged up again."

"Another and a seasonable rule is never to lay your watch down on stone or marble. The cold deranges the delicate works."

"Never lay your watch down, in fact, anywhere. Hang it on a hook, vertically, in the same position it occupied when in your pocket. Watches were made to lie, or rather stand, in that position only."

"Wind your watch in the morning, never at night."

BABY'S OWN TABLETS USED FROM BIRTH.

Mrs. H. V. Ossinger, Tiverton, N. S., says: "We have used Baby's Own Tablets since our little boy was three years old and know of nothing to equal them. He is now twelve months old and has always enjoyed perfect health. Baby takes the Tablets easily and we always keep them in the house." Mrs. Ossinger's experience is that of thousands of other mothers. An occasional dose of the Tablets will keep the well child in excellent health, or if the baby is ill with any of the many ailments that afflict little ones, they will speedily restore him to health again and make him thrive and grow fat, rosy and strong. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

It Never Flickers

The long winter evenings give a woman a splendid chance for sewing or embroidery; but her eyes suffer from the strain unless she has a good light.

The Rayo is the best lamp made.

It gives a strong, diffused light that is remarkably easy to the eyes. There is no glare to it; no flicker. It lights up a whole room. The Rayo is an economical lamp, too.

You get the most possible light-value for the oil burned; and the Rayo itself is a low-priced lamp. Yet it is a handsome lamp—an ornament to any room in the house. The Rayo Lamp is easily lighted without removing shade or chimney; easy to clean and rewick. Made of solid brass, nickel-plated; also in numerous other styles and finishes.

Ask your dealer to show you his line of Rayo lamps; or write for descriptive circular to any agency of

THE LAND OF WAR AND SONG

IN MONTENEGRO MEN LIVE ON WITH BULLETS IN THEM.

And a Man Dying From Two Is Held a Victim of the Will of God.

"It would be easy to miss the frontier of Montenegro if one were not on the lookout for it," says a writer in the Queen. "It is marked by a row of paving stones set obliquely across the road and a post painted with the Austrian black and yellow. Shortly after passing the border we saw two picturesque figures drop down from the rocks with the grace and agility of chamois. They were dressed in the native garb of red jackets, wide blue trousers, white gaiters fastened up the back with brass hooks and sandals laced with string. They wore little caps and their rifles were slung over shoulder.

"The Prince's patrol," said our driver, as they saluted and swung along beside the carriage. He replied to their questioning and apparently satisfied them, for without looking at passports or overhauling baggage they saluted again, fell behind and were lost in the landscape.

"Then we turned inland and covered the level mile to Njegush. This important village is the cradle of the present dynasty and the birthplace of King Nicholas I.

IT IS A FERTILE SPOT

and like all the cultivable land of Montenegro appears to be the basin of a long dry lake. We were too high now for the vine, the olive and the orange.

"Not even the wild pomegranate, so plentiful in Dalmatia, could follow us here. There were fields of rye and potatoes, or earth pears. We lunched lightly at the inn on excellent rye bread and coffee—one can generally rely upon these and the wine being good—and when the horses were rested drove on through the valley, over a pass and then down zigzags to Cetinje, which with its 2,000 inhabitants is the smallest capital in Europe.

"The streets are wide and well metalled. The houses are small, but they looked well built and comfortable and there are wells at various corners, where the people draw water in the evening. None of the Montenegrins is greatly rich or greatly poor. The independence of the individual is as remarkable as that of the nation. We only saw two beggars in Cetinje, a crippled woman in a wheeled chair and a blind man who sang to the gusla. This is the national instrument, a one stringed fiddle carved with a horse's head.

"There are villalike palaces for the royal family and various rather imposing legations, but in the main both houses and churches are very modest in appearance and do not lay claim to any great antiquity. It was the people who interested us chiefly.

"THE DALMATIAN SLOUCHES.

WIND AND RAIN AND SNOW.

"All alike wear the poetic head-dress of their country, a little round cap, which is at once a dirge, a lyric and a song of victory. It has a red top and a brim of peddled black silk, which is used as a purse. The black is mourning for the lost country; the red is in memory of the blood which has been shed. On the crown are five lines of gold arranged like a rising sun—they are for five centuries of glorious independence—and below them, in the Russian character, are the initials of the beloved ruler who has lately been made King.

"The Montenegrin type of face is short, square, brown eyed, dark haired. It is ready enough to smile, to see a joke, but in repose it has a tragic sadness, a look of mourning that matches the black cap brim. What do the Montenegrins mourn in their sunny home? Perhaps it is the Herzegovina, a fairer and more fertile land. It was once their country, but the tide of Turkish invasion drove them from it, and they fled to the Black Mountain and wrung a living from its gray, unfriendly slopes.

"They sowed their seeds in the little pockets of earth that collect in dips and dells in the rock and built themselves houses of the plentiful stone. They grew hardly from the hard life, looked forward to the time when they would have their revenge upon the Turks and kept their weapons sharp and their wits bright against the day.

"The soil is rich, but there is very little of it, so every patch is made to contribute its half dozen potatoes or its

"You will wonder," said a Dalmatian friend, "how such a country can grow such tall, fine men." He had been in Cetinje in October, 1909 at the time of the ratification of the treaty by which Austria annexed Bosnia and the Herzegovine. He said that war had seemed certain and that the Montenegrins wished to cross the border immediately to attack the Austrians, so indignant were they that the country which was once theirs and from which their Prince had ousted the Turks, should be given away by Europe to Austria.

"Envoys came in from all the villages eagerly asking, 'Will there be war to-day?' The standards were on their way to the church. One was carried by an old man over 60, who was told that he was too old to fight. He retorted that his family had held the banner for 300 years, and that until his son, for whom he had cabled, returned from America he would yield it to none. But the envoys went sadly back to their village to say that there would be no war. The Prince counselled peace and his loyal subjects obeyed him.

"The Montenegrin's simple field equipment hangs in a corner of this house. It consists of a rifle and a new pair of 'opanaka' (sandals). The question of supply and transport does not occupy the staff very seriously, for a man will live two days on a piece of bread the size of his fist. He takes three days rations with him when he goes out to fight, and if he were asked why he did not take more he would answer, 'I have enough for three days. By that time either I shall have killed the enemy and

OWNED BY A WEALTHY ENGLISH SQUIRE.

Astonishing Results Achieved by Mr. Wingfield in the Training of Animals.

How to endow a pig with sense—that is one of the many animal problems A. W. Wingfield, of Amptill, Bedfordshire, England, has made his special study.

Private Menageries have been the hobby of monarchs, lords, and potentates ever since Nero fed his lions with Christian victims, but the great expense involved in collecting and keeping wild animals makes the pastime one only a rich man can follow. At a time when Mr. Wingfield only possessed a yak, there was already a large private menagerie in Bedfordshire, owned by the Duke of Bedford, who draws most of his wealth from market dues on garden produce sold in Covent Garden market. There is, however, a great outstanding difference between the Amptill Park stud and that to be found in any other part of the country, for all the beasts and birds it contains have been dominated by the human will and their intelligence thereby raised to a high level.

Psychologists are astonished by what has been accomplished by Mr. Wingfield, who as a Fellow of the Royal Zoological Society, enjoys the added advantage of access at all times to the Zoo in Regent's Park, where two of his llamas are now on loan.

TRAINED LLAMAS.

sacred beasts of the Orient, which for the nonce were used as steeds by the same equestrian experts who had previously shown off their prowess on other animals.

TINY SHETLAND PONIES.

In a paddock near by, there was a fine bunch of Shetland ponies, one or two almost of the much-prized height, twenty-four inches. When Mr. Wingfield succeeds as a breeder in producing animals of this coveted small stature, he will be able to get one thousand dollars apiece for every animal.

In another part of the grounds are to be seen emus from Australia, happy as on their native soil, near by, a Barbary ram, tamed sufficiently to allow a well-grown boy to sit on his back.

Mr. Wingfield's reason for training his animals for the saddle is just an intense interest in animal life, and the knowledge of the pleasurable results to be obtained from animal study as a hobby. He sometimes effects an exchange of animals with public and private collectors, but seldom deals in such stock on a monetary basis.

On the general principles of training, Mr. Wingfield has very definite views. "No animal," he said, "can be thoroughly mastered without the exercise of the greatest firmness. Once permit an ostrich, llama, zebra, or any animal to think that he is getting the upper hand, and your weeks of work go as naught. Some people are under the impression that animals cannot be trained without a certain amount of cruelty being introduced into the process. This is a fallacy, for many animals have such stubborn natures that cruelty only serves to set their backs up, while at the same time it tends to lessen their intelligence."

He is always ready for a rest, and though he falls into the most graceful positions upon a doorstep, against a tree or down upon his mother earth one gets tired of his picturesque idleness. The Montenegrin has squarer shoulders and a stiffer back. He walks as if he wishes to arrive somewhere and looks upwad and outward like an eagle.

"The peasants wear long coats of white feltlike cloth with bright sashes and all have the 'torba' or pouch common throughout Dalmatia. It is a big leather contrivance, handy receptacle for pistol, knives, pipe and tobacco. The women are very comely, quiet eyed, dark haired. They wear handkerchiefs or lace veils over their heads and long, sleeveless coats of a pale color, just touched with embroidery, a becoming dress for old and young. The Montenegrin wife does not have a very easy time, she does nearly all the work and soon grows old.

"We drove into Podgorica one evening and met the country people on their way home after a market, and the heavy burdens that the women carried astonished us. One trudged wearily along with a calf on her shoulders, while her magnificent husband stepped out beside her carrying—nothing! It was a sight to make one feel indignant, but the matter was soon explained. The man's duty is to protect the woman, and until recently the journey to market was apt to be

"No man could be hampered by carrying produce, and we were told that the woman would get very angry if he encroached upon her sphere of work. This may or may not be true, but it would seem probable that after she had carried the calf for four or five miles, she might pardon the insult of the man who transferred it from her shoulders to his own.

"On the night of our arrival in Cetinje khaki coats were being experimented with for the first time, with a view to their being worn by the army. We wondered why they should be considered necessary, for the rough peasant coat falls in with the landscape even better. One streak of grime upon him and the wearer is a stone among the green, a tree stump in the woods, one sheep of his flock, a bit of broken masonry under a wall. No khaki can hide him better than his own homeliness, and in his native mountains he can defy both the eye and the microscope.

"This man I means does not wear this undyed material. He has a green wide skirted coat, with sleeves all near the shoulder, so that he may wear the coat without them when it is warm. And this gives him a strange though very dignified appearance as he walks down the Katunska Ulica, a spare pair of sleeves hanging behind him and his 'straka,' a brown, carpety plaid, with snicks of color, folded over his shoulder, its long fringe swinging at every step. When the soldier takes the field the straka is his blanket. It is much smaller and stiffer than the Scottish plaid, but it is almost waterproof, and the Highlanders of Montenegro consider it a sufficient protection against days' rainous with him when he goes out to fight, and if he were asked why he did not take more he would answer, 'I have enough for three days. By that time either I shall have killed the enemy and taken his food or else I shall be dead myself.'

"These were the views held by the people whom we saw walking arm in arm at Cetinje in the cool of the evening or talking in little groups. Now and then one splendid would detach itself and stride up to another, salute, perhaps kiss, shake hands, say a few smiling words and then withdraw again. We were as much impressed by the charm of their manners toward each other as by their unflinching courtesy to strangers. They treat one another with great affection and respect until—! But the revolver that peeps out of the red leather 'torba' is always ready for use and the blood feud is a living and a dreadful reality, and no mere dramatic fragment of a dead past. Part of the Montenegrin's social creed is that 'he who avenges himself is blessed.'

"A lady who knows the country well told us that after one of these encounters, when a man who 'owed blood' had been mortally wounded and died, she made her views upon the subject known. The survivor insisted that it was God's will that his enemy should die. Our friend pointed out that it was not very likely that he could live when he had one bullet in the chest and another in the knee. 'But that is only two bullets,' returned the man. 'Some of us have eight bullets in us and we are not dead. If a man dies from only two bullets it must surely be the will of God!'

"Bravery is not lacking. It was an ancestor of King Nicholas who held the monastery of Ostrog with thirteen against several thousand Turks, and when a bomb thrown by the enemy lit upon the Ostrog wall the Vladaika seized it and flung it back, and it burst in the Turkish ranks and drove them off. There are not only many tales of the splendid past, but there is also today much that is noble and heroic that one could wish for another Homer to praise and celebrate this land of war and song."

QUEEN MARY'S COURT TRAIN.

The court train subscribed for by Irish ladies as a coronation gift to Queen Mary is now finished and on exhibition in Belfast. The train, which is said to be the finest piece of point needlework ever made, has occupied fifty seamstresses in Youghal ever since the order was given six months ago. It is four yards long and nearly two yards wide at the bottom, tapering to the width of the shoulders at the top. It is worked in a cabochon design of fuchsias and roses, and contains more than five and a quarter million stitches and 20,000 yards of thread. The ladies who are making the presentation intended that the train should be ready for the durbar, and Queen Mary has expressed her intention of taking it with her for the festivities there.

Every married woman is satisfied that she could name the crackiest man in the world if called upon to do so.

days' rainous with him when he goes out to fight, and if he were asked why he did not take more he would answer, 'I have enough for three days. By that time either I shall have killed the enemy and taken his food or else I shall be dead myself.'

The first item on the program was an exhibition of the queerest rivals horses can have ever had, six fast trotting llamas ridden by attendants. They were properly harnessed, with bridle, saddle, and stirrups, and seemed to know what was expected of them. After showing off their form, they posed for the camera on the lawn, arching their heads and betraying all the self-conscious symptoms of a bevy of pretty girls about to be kodaked.

For a diversion, Bruno, a young bear from India, was brought out to demonstrate what civilizing influences can effect for his kind of shaggy monster. In obedience to a jerk on his chain, he stood upon a chair, making a curious singing noise in his throat, and sucking his left fore paw with babylike persistency. At another sign he jumped to the greensward, and after grunting out a solo Tetrazzini ought to hear, gamboled off with his keeper to enjoy a large bowl of bread and milk. It was the queerest vocal effort ever heard, on the stage or off.

ZEBRAS VERY SHY.

Zebras are the most difficult beasts to train. Much tact, infinite patience, and watchful firmness are required, but even now they have to be blindfolded before they will submit to be harnessed. More than any other animals in this wonderful menagerie at Amptill, they are shy of a stranger, and jib at the very smell of one. With the exception of the zebras in Lionel de Rothschild's collection, the members of this species owned by Mr. Wingfield are the only specimens to be found in a private menagerie in Britain.

After the zebras came the ostriches, three stately fellows, who stalked round the house carrying their keepers, who guided them with a touch on the neck with a light cane. It was truly astonishing to see how the gigantic birds obeyed the orders thus conveyed to them, swerving to the right hand or to the left, according to instructions.

Heralded by pompous gruntings came two hogs, one drawing two children in a small cart, and the other carrying a trainer, who appeared to have no apprehension that his steed would bolt. The swine literally waddled with delight at their own skill, and left the beholder almost speechless at the ability that could make such stupid beasts amenable to discipline. Mr. Wingfield said in reply to a question:

"It is an injustice to the pig to condemn him as a creature without sense. For he has quite his fair share of intelligence. All he wants to grasp is what he is expected to do, and at the same time to be thoroughly convinced that no harm will befall him if he does it, and that he will not be maltreated while learning what is asked of him."

The fine Palestine camel that passed with the burden of two men either side of its hump illustrated another phase of the trainer's art. Brahmins would have been aghast at the next sight that was presented—some Indian horned cattle, the duced into the process. This is a fallacy, for many animals have such stubborn natures that cruelty only serves to set their backs up, while at the same time it tends to lessen their intelligence."

THE PRINCE'S EDUCATION.

Will Not Undertake Public Duties Until He is Eighteen.

While the King and Queen are away in India the young Prince of Wales will remain at Sandringham with his tutor, studying for his approaching university course, which will probably begin in the spring. Actual dates for the various stages of the Prince's education have not yet been fixed, but during the next five years he will have got through his Oxford career, entered the army and made a tour round the world with his brother Albert.

Sooner or later he will be gazetted to his father's regiment, the Tenth Hussars, of which the King has constituted himself Colonel-in-Chief, as King Edward was before him. After serving with this crack cavalry regiment for some months he will serve with the artillery and the engineers. As a subaltern he will have his own quarters and servants, but his life will be that of any other subaltern.

It is the desire of both the King and the Queen that he shall remain a boy as long as possible. He will not undertake any public duties until he is 18, next June. It is not likely that he will have a household before his marriage, and he will simply have one or two equerries.

He has only spent three months on actual service in the navy, though it is believed that, like his father, he prefers the senior service. He is considered strong in mathematics and is a fair linguist, but has never shown much liking for the dead languages.

WEDDING PRESENTS.

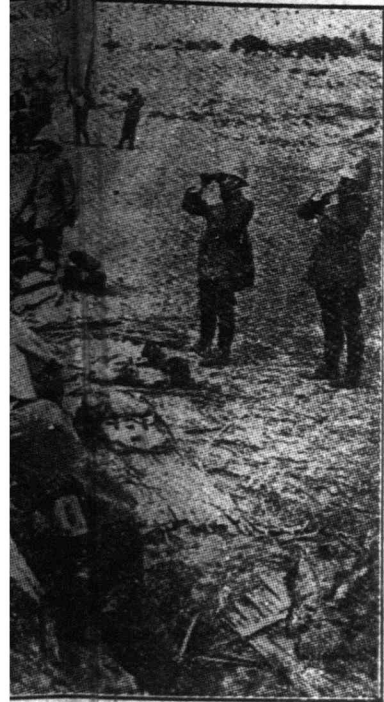

Sent on Approval in England and Returned After Wedding.

A trick to make a good showing of presents at a wedding has been revealed recently by a London, (England) firm of silversmiths, who say that certain of their customers have sent for six or seven wedding presents at about $20 each, to be sent on approval to their houses, all the goods being returned after the wedding with a note to the effect that they were unsuitable.

This is certainly a cheaper plan than hiring presents, as many middle class families have done in the past. As it is a time honored custom to show wedding presents in England it is possible to hire silver dishes, knives, forks, rose bowls, cut glass dishes, &c., should friends and relatives have failed to do what is expected of them for the bride and bridegroom.

The goods that are used in this way are all labelled with good wishes and other appropriate inscriptions and placed among the genuine gifts. After festivities are over they are returned with the sum due for their use. Naturally they are not much handled and do service for a long time in this way.

Somebody says that it is a good thing not to live their private lives publicly.

A LITTLE DOMESTIC SECRET.

A Lesson From Shan Which Some Ladies Might Copy.

The Shan races have a considerable literature, embracing an interesting body of folk-tales, specimens of which appear in Mrs. Leslie Milne's book, "Shans at Home." The following story is intended to convey a delicate hint to Shan ladies, but it is not likely to be included in the "literature" of those modern feminine movements which are headed by ladies who do not live along the banks of the Irrawaddy.

There once lived a poor fisherman, who fell in love with a girl as poor as himself, but very wise. They married, and one day the girl went with her husband to help him set their nets in the river.

As they went, the fisherman said, "Wife, do you see that crow? It is very white."

"Yes, my lord," she answered, "it is very white."

As they walked, an egret flew overhead, and he said, "Wife, do you see that egret? It is very black."

"Yes, my lord," she answered, "it is very black, indeed."

In due time they came to the river, and helped each other in the sinking of the nets. They worked together all day, and caught an immense number of fish—so many that they could not carry them all to their home. From that day they prospered, and in time grew rich.

They had neighbors, who knew their good fortune, and envied them. One of these neighbors, a poor man, said to his wife, "Let us go fishing, as our neighbors did."

So they went to the river. On

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL STUDY

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,

NOV. 28.

Lesson IX.—Nehemiah's Prayer, Neh. 1. Golden Text, James 5. 16.

"Verse 1. The words—The margin has "history," a rendering that of course alters the sense considerably. As a matter of fact, the book does not consist entirely of the words of Nehemiah, there being a break of several chapters (7. 73 to 12. 31) in which the writer has drawn from other sources besides the personal memoirs of Nehemiah. "The history of Nehemiah" might mean either a historical book by him or a record of his deeds. Whichever reading is preferred it doubtless should be regarded as an editorial heading.

Son of Hachabiah. This is simply a designation, differentiating Nehemiah from others of the same name (Ezra 2. 2, Neh. 2. 16). We know nothing of the father, and can only make conjectures as to his tribe. Some have thought Nehemiah belonged to Levi, others, to Judah. The more important fact about him is, that being an exile, occupying a place of prominence in a foreign court, he should still have entertained his own people.

Now—The abrupt manner in which the book begins is an evidence of its close connection with the story which precedes. The month Chislew was the ninth in the Jewish calendar, and corresponded nearly to our December. It was in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes Longimanus, or B. C. 445. It was in the seventh year of the same reign that Ezra was given permission to return.

Shushan—See Word Studies for November 5. Since the days of Cyrus, it had been the principal capital of the Persian empire, and was used by the kings as their winter residence. The word palace here, however, signifies more than a royal abode. It was a special designation given to Shushan, and refers to its being a stronghold as well as a city of kings. The remains of the ancient city, near the modern town of Dizful, eighty miles east of the Tigris, are said to be of astonishing magnitude.

2. Hanani—Nehemiah 7. 2 speaks of him as "my brother," meaning something more than a mere fellow countryman. The phrase, one of my brethren, makes it seem unlikely that he was own brother to Nehemiah; but he may have been a cousin or other near relative.

He and certain men out of Judah—The language implies that they came expressly for the purpose of seeking, and obtaining if possible the aid of their influential countryman. Nehemiah questions them, first, as to the welfare of the Jews who were in their own land and had survived the captivity; and, secondly, concerning Jerusalem. His eagerness for some scrap of news is apparent in his not waiting to hear their story before putting his questions.

his question, is twofold, and relates to the remnant, and the wall and marily it consisted in their dealing corruptly against Jehovah himself (7). Nehemiah is thinking, not so much of recent events, as of the whole course of Israel's history.

9. Yet will I gather them—The gracious promise of restoration, as well as the threat of dispersion, is found in various places in the Pentateuch. The only condition is that the penitent return, and that he keep the commandments as a practical evidence of his sincerity. The whole transaction is national, the sinning, the suffering, the returning, the merciful restoration. The place chosen by Jehovah is Jerusalem.

10. Thy people, whom thou hast redeemed—Their claim to the fulfillment of promise, therefore, rests upon no insecure foundation. They are not aliens, but direct descendants of his own chosen ones, whom he had snatched out of the hands of the Egyptians.

11. Prosper . . . thy servant this day—His final entreaty is not only for an answer to the general petitions of himself and the people, but for particular and immediate help as he ventures into the presence of the king with an unusual request. He had reason to dread the interview with Artaxerxes, inasmuch as it was because of an act of this very monarch that such evil had befallen Jerusalem.

I was cupbearer—This was a position of great influence and responsibility. It gave the servant entrance into the king's most secluded privacy. He was required first to pour some of the wine into the palm of his hand and drink it before handing it to the king. So the king's life was in reality in his hands, and it was necessary for him to be of good character.

IT PAYS TO ANALYZE COAL.

What Comes From One District May Vary Very Much.

Chemistry has shown that coals from the same district may vary as greatly as cuts of meat from the same beef. That coal varies greatly in its proportion of ash, sulphur and heat units (the elements that affect the value of steam coal) is shown by the exhaustive tests that many large users now require before purchase.

A neglect of this precaution often results disastrously. For instance, according to Business, a manufacturer who had taken advantage of an opportunity to save a few dollars on the first cost of his coal by buying some that he had been assured came from the same district as the good coal he has formerly used, soon found himself in considerable trouble.

The increase in consumption to keep up the required amount of steam was so great that the added labor brought forth immediately complaints from the engine room. Firing had to be almost incessant and grates became clogged so rapidly that stoking was also close to a continuous operation and all the while the ash pile was growing into a mountain.

A chemist was called in finally to look into the condition. He did so, and his test proved that the coal contained a fraction less than two-thirds ash. Such lessons cost money, but they have to be learned in some way and the great ash heap, two-thirds the size of the original coal pile, made a striking

CHINESE GREATEST SHRINE

TEMPLE AND ALTAR OF HEAVEN LOCATED IN PEKIN.

Foreigners Are Never Allowed to See the Ceremonies Performed There.

The temple of Heaven is the most sacred as well as the most beautiful of all Chinese religious edifices. It is used only for imperial worship, and no foreigner has yet seen the stately and elaborate ceremonies that take place here on fixed dates every year. The buildings of which it consists are situated in a large walled park in the southeast section of the Chinese city of Peking. A broad, stone paved road leads to the temple from Chienman, the largest gate of the Tartar city. The gate is exactly in front of the main entrance to the imperial palace. The massive doors at its central entrance are thrown open only when the Emperor leaves his palace to visit the Temple of Heaven or the Temple of Agriculture.

The park in which the Temple of Heaven lies is almost square in shape and is surrounded by a stout wall, nearly for miles long. Inside it is divided into sections by other walls and the visitor is bewildered by the number of gates through which he passes when being shown round the sacred buildings. At each he has to pay a small sum to the gatekeepers, who rely upon these tips as their main source of income. Some of the inclosures contain majestic buildings; others enclose the grazing grounds of the sacred animals, reared for immolation upon the temple altars.

which is generally known as the Temple of Heaven, but is called by the Chinese the Temple of Prayer for the Year, to which the Emperor repairs each spring to make offerings and pray for an auspicious year for his people, is a landmark for miles round. Its triple roof of deep blue, gold-flecked tiles, surmounted by a massive gilt sphere, can be seen from the rail—was some time before Peking is reached.

It is comparatively a new building, having been erected since 1880, when the old temple, of which this is an exact copy, was destroyed by fire. It stands on a triple marble terrace, having a stairway at each of the four points of the compass. When the emperor comes here to worship, the tablets of his ancestors, which are usually kept in an adjoining building, are placed round the single lofty chamber of which the temple consists. A long marble paved terrace leads southward from the Temple of Heaven past a smaller building of similar design known as the Temple of the Universe, to the inclosure containing the altar of Heaven.

It may be doubted whether any structure in the world excels this for grandeur and beauty. The marble-paved courtyard that surrounds it, like all the terraces in the park, it ill-kept and overgrown with weeds, and even the altar terrace itself is scattered with shrubs and grasses. But nothing can detract from the majestic

Duchess of Marlborough Installs Them in Her Home.

Following the example of Pierpont Morgan, whose treasure house in London has been more than once the object of an attack by burglars, the Duchess of Marlborough has now installed a band of detectives at Sanderland House, her residence in Mayfair, London.

Six ex-Scotland Yard men are now employed—three for day and three for night duty. Although the mansion is fitted with the most finished and expensive system of burglar alarms, the duchess recently developed a state of nervousness that produced insomnia and was undermining her health.

She commenced to carry about all her most valuable jewelry, whenever she went abroad, but when it was pointed out to her that this was a dangerous proceeding, she decided to adopt the detective scheme of protection.

This little enterprise will cost her at least $3,000 a year, but she thinks it is money well spent. The detectives patrol the corridors all day and night, while one man keeps a watchful eye on strange visitors. Servants, too, are kept under observation, for recent cases have shown they are often in league with thieves.

his question, is twofold, and relates to the remnant, and the wall and gates of the city. Within the city the people were in a sad plight, and from without they are subjected to the reproach of their enemies. The walls have been broken down at vulnerable points so as to admit some foe and deprive the city of its means of resistance.

4. I sat down and wept—Compare Esth. 4. 3. His sudden dismay indicates his complete surprise. He must have known of the expedition of Ezra and the attempt to rebuild the wall, also of the edict of Artaxerxes prohibiting further work in that direction. But it was an unexpected blow to hear of Jerusalem defenceless and dishonored.

Before the God of heaven—The interest of this title for the Deity is in its frequent occurrence, not alone in the writings of Nehemiah but also in the Persian inscriptions, and in the edicts of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes. While it can hardly be shown that it is of Persian origin it almost certainly originated with the Jews under Persian rule. It is a title of universal sovereignty, and indicates that the wider experiences of the Jews tended to enlarge their conception of God, so that he is no longer to them a divinity whose sway is limited by the boundaries of Palestine.

5-11. Nehemiah's prayer. Compare with the prayer of Daniel (Dan. 9. 4-19), and that of Ezra (Ezra 9. 5-15). The prayer may be analyzed as follows: (1) address; (2) humble invocation; (3) confession of sins; (4) appeal to the divine promises; (5) closing supplication for immediate help.

6. Great and terrible God—An idea of God borrowed from Deut. 7. 21. In times of calamity the human heart is visited with a sense of the might and terror of Jehovah. These awe-inspiring attributes, however, are blended with home-inspiring thoughts of God's mercy and faithfulness. He will surely keep his covenant and loving-kindness with those who keep his commandments. The sentence is also derived from Deuteronomy. With God the keeping of the covenant consists in his continuing to show mercy. This mercy is vouchsafed only to those who return to their allegiance in the spirit of obedience and love.

6. Thine ear . . . attentive, and thine eyes open—This is somewhat in the temper of the psalmist, but it is full of earnestness. This is evident in the plea that the prayer is offered day and night. The faith and humbleness of heart of such reiterated supplication cannot be overlooked.

I confess the . . . we have sinned—He identifies himself with his own erring people. In its consciousness of sin the entire race of men is one. That is one notable thing about the confession. Another is the kind of national conscience manifest in the expression, I and my father's house. Neither the individual nor the family can escape responsibility. Nothing is said about the enemies at home. The real foes of Nehemiah's people have been their failure to keep the commandments, and statutes, and ordinances (7). So their sin has been a violation of the Law. But priso, and his test proved that the coal contained a fraction less than two-thirds ash! Such lessons cost money, but they have to be learned in a man and the great ash heap, two-thirds ash, and one-third original coal pile, made a striking object lesson.

The storage of coal is also a considerable item. Frequent handling will greatly increase its cost. In one plant where an expert was called in to advise on this subject he discovered that the company was spending 53 cents a ton on the transportation of coal from the time it reached the siding until it went into the furnaces.

In a German factory firemen trained to appreciate the scientific principles involved in the work produced a saving over the work of the regular but untrained stokers of $8.50 a day, or $50 a week of 144 hours. The untrained men had produced a thermal efficiency of 66.6 per cent., while the trained stokers, on the same job, brought it up to 72.7 per cent., an actual saving if expressed in dollars and cents of $8.50 a day. In another German plant where a similar test was made a saving three times the amount of that just quoted was produced.

A HINT FROM SAVAGES.

Paraguay Indians Seldom Lose Their Good Humor.

The life of a Chaco Indian in the Paraguayan country of South America would be almost intolerable were it not for his characteristic patience and self-control in the face of the most adverse circumstances. Mr. W. B. Grubb, in "An Unknown People in an Unknown Land," says that they seldom lose their good humor, and are slow to take offense.

They are remarkable for making the best of their circumstances, and for extracting all the pleasure that they can from their lot. In their wild nomadic life they often incur serious losses. For example, when a man loses his only horse from sickness, or their dogs suffer severely from the ravages of wild beasts, or their gardens are completely destroyed by a flood of locusts. But all these calamities they bear cheerfully.

Their patience contrasts strangely with the lack of endurance that we sometimes show in similar circumstances, and the Indians are very quick to remark on our poor-spirited behavior.

One day, when travelling with a party of Indians, we camped during the midday heat near a forest. The mosquitoes and sand flies were unbearable, and I could not conceal my irritation. This greatly amused the Indians, and they asked me why I was angry.

I told them the reason was obvious.

On this they asked me if I knew the language of the mosquitoes. "Because if you do," they said, "it would be wise to speak hard words to them."

This was to illustrate the wise maxim which the Indian fulfills in his daily life. "What cannot be cured must be endured."

SPEAKS BAD FOR HIM.

marble-paved courtyard that surrounds it, like all the terraces in the park, it ill-kept and overgrown with weeds, and even the altar terrace itself is overgrown with shrubs and grasses. But nothing can detract from the majestic simplicity of the altar.

THE SON OF HEAVEN.

It is an imposing spectacle at any time, but I have visited it under conditions that enhanced its beauty. The sun was sinking in the west behind the distant hills, as if it enforced flight from a massive thunder cloud that was hurrying up from the east. The marble terraces shone radiantly in the sunshine, silhouetted against the impenetrable pall of cloud behind, producing a weird and unforgettable effect. It is on this altar, kneeling on the circular slab of marble that marks its center, that the emperor at each winter solstice, officiating as the high priest of his people (by whom he is known as the "son of heaven"), worships heaven and his ancestors at dawn.

The previous night is spent in meditation and fasting in the Hall of Abstinence, a fitting preparation for the solemn rites that are to follow. Nearly two hours before dawn the emperor is called and arrayed in ceremonial raiment, after which he makes his way to the altar in a sedan chair, and kneeling on the center stone of the topmost terrace, burns incense to Heaven and renders an account of the important events of the year.

Burnt offerings of animals are made on an altar of green porcelain to the south east of the main altar. In bronze braziers ranged round the court the death sentences and offerings of silk and jade are committed to the flames. These sacrifices, it may be mentioned, are not of the various significance of Jewish offerings, but are made with the idea of propitiating Heaven with.

RAIMENT AND FOOD.

But with whatever motives the annual sacrifices are made here, one cannot visit that spot without feeling that it is holy ground.

Graves of cypress trees surround the altar inclosure, except to the north, where a series of triple gates marks the way to the Temple of the Universe, while in the distance beyond the roof of the Temple of Heaven can be seen. Never had mortal words a more perfect setting. In his annual pilgrimage to the altar the emperor carries on an immemorial custom, handed down through generations, and by so doing he publicly claims his divine right, answerable only to Heaven, for the manner in which he performs his mission as governor of one of the largest empires of the world.

BEWARE OF BLOOD POISON.

Zam Buk is a Sure Cure.

Mr. James Davey, of 786 Ellice Avenue, Winnipeg, says: "A few months since I was cured of a poisoned finger through a timely use of Zam-Buk."

"I cut a deep gash across the knuckle on the first finger of my right hand in opening a lobster can. I suffered at the time with soreness and pain, but had no idea it would become a serious wound. However, in about about two days I was greatly alarmed; as my whole hand and arm to the elbow became suddenly inflamed, and the finger was much discolored, showing signs of blood-poisoning. The pain was dreadful and I was forced to leave off my work and go home."

"The wound on the knuckle had been poisoned by dust and dirt getting into it. I then decided to start the Zam-Buk treatment, and having first bathed the cut, I applied the heating balm. It soothed the pain almost instantly, and by next day there was a great improvement."

"In a week's time, through perseverance with this wonderful preparation, a complete cure was brought about."

Zam-Buk is just as good for eczema, ulcers, scalp sores, abscesses, piles, ringworm, boils, varicose ulcers, running sores, cold sores, chapped hands, etc. It draws all poisonous foulness from a wound or sore and then heals. Use it, too, for cuts, burns, bruises and all skin injuries. Zam-Buk Soap should be used in conjunction to the balm for washing wounds and sore places. Excellent too for baby's bath.

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box and Zam-Buk Soap at 25c. tablet. Post free upon receipt of price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

FORESTRY IN SAXONY.

The aggregate area of the state forest of Saxony is less than 450,000 acres. The yield of the state forests in the year 1908 was 225 million feet board measure. In this total are compressed eighty-three per cent of wood and timber fit for technical use and seventeen per cent of firewood. The age of final maturity beyond which trees are not allowed to remain is, for spruce, eighty years; for pine, eighty years; for all hardwoods, one hundred and twenty years. The diameter of the trees measured at four and a half feet above the ground at these ages depends entirely on the quality of the soil. It varies for spruce, between eight and ten inches; for pine, between six and ten inches. The entire gross expense for forestry in 1908 was a million and a half dollars: forty per cent for salaries; forty per cent for logging and forest experiments, and twenty per cent for planting and road building. The entire gross revenue from forestry in 1908 was three million, nine hundred thousand dollars. The net revenue was as a consequence, two million, four hundred thousand dollars, equal to five dollars and thirty-two cents net per acre.

FRENCHMEN IN AFRICA

THEY CONTROL NEARLY A THIRD OF DARK CONTINENT.

The Republic is a Splendid Colonizing Nation and is Doing Wonders in Developing Its Immense Holdings and in Improving the People—Railroads Run All Over the Northern Territory.

Nearly everything in Africa to-day is dominated by three great overlords—England, France and Germany. Great Britain and France together control about two-thirds of the continent, the British third being by far the most important. Germany owns only a small part of the remaining third, but its steamship and trading interests entitle it to a voice in all African councils, writes Edgar Allan Forbes in the Review of Reviews.

France excels as a colonial power. No other nation has so many fine harbors in Africa. You expect these along the Mediterranean, of course, but not along the western coast, which is pounded by a tremendous surf from Tangier to the Cape. The writer caught his first glimpse of Casablanca just after the French army of occupation had landed—and there was the beginning of a huge breakwater that would cost millions. He went into the harbor of Dakar (French West Africa) on a heavy cargo boat—and there were docks that would be a credit to New York City. The big boat ran alongside the pier under its own steam and unloaded its freight on a capacious wharf that was provided with a branch railroad to connect with the main line. This is the French way—to provide excellent landing facilities and safe anchorages. They do not surpass the British in providing for steamship service between colony and homeland, but the Briton builds not harbors after this fashion.

Take railroads. The writer found trains to carry him all over French North Africa, with two branch lines that actually run down into the Sahara Desert—and a telegraph line that goes all the way across that burning inland sea of sand. At Dakar he found a railroad running up to the mouth of the Senegal river, where the steamer makes connection and carries freight and passengers to the head of navigation on the Senegal. There another railroad picks them up and carries them across to navigable water on the Upper Niger and turns them over to steamers that run to Timbuctu. And at Casablanca, in the land of no railroads, the first thing that he clambered over when he stepped from the surf boat was an embankment with steel rails on top—the beginning of a French military railroad. Massive bridges, macadamized highways, telephones, fine public buildings, electric railways—you meet them nearly everywhere you travel in France's African empire.

In educational policy the French are as advanced as in the material. In Tunis, for example, which is one of the younger French colonies, he found so many schools that he could not even classify them—schools for French, for Italians, for Jews, for Arabs; schools for Arabs to learn French and others for French to learn Arabic; agricultural schools, theological schools, normal schools to train native teachers. And what France has done for the Arab she is doing on a different scale for the black-skinned proteges of the west coast and of the vast interior.

A policy of conciliation marks the French official in all parts of this vast empire. During all the time he saw a French in uniform act or speak arrogantly toward a native. The Arab and the French negro seemed to be on

The Laugh on Edison.

There are many stories of Edison. One of his early childhood is recorded on the authority of his only sister. When he was about six years old he found out that a goose belonging to the family was sitting. Later he saw the surprising result in a number of goslings. One day he was missing. He was sought everywhere, but no one could find him until at length his father discovered him in the barn curled up in a nest he had made and filled with goose eggs and hen eggs. He was sitting on the eggs and trying to hatch them—London Tatler.

'Let it,' says the farmer. 'The wall will be two feet higher if it does fall over!'" as their ends are forced into the water they are broken off and set adrift as bergs. Occupation of Idols.

Some strange occupations figure on Indian census schedules. At the last census in many villages of Haidarabad and the central provinces enthusiastic and devout enumerators returned the village shrines and temples as "occupied houses." The occupant was the idol, whose occupation was stated as "granting boons and blessings, living on contributions from the tenants." Other callings returned on the schedules include collectors of edible birds' nests, receivers of stolen goods, witches, wizards and cow poisoners.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Greatest Waterfall.

The largest of earth's waterfalls is the Victoria Falls of the Zambesi River, in Rhodesia, Africa. They are 386 feet high and more than a mile wide. Niagara's height is 160 feet. The water power of the Zambesi Falls is estimated to be fully 35,000,000 horsepower, which is five times greater than that of Niagara. Some idea of the greatness of the Zambesi cataract may be got from the fact that the aggregate water power of all Europe cannot greatly exceed 35,000,000 horsepower.

saw a Frenchman in uniform act or speak arrogantly toward a native. The Arab and the French negro seemed to be on equal footing with the white man so far as public institutions and conveniences were concerned. The religion of the Mohammedan received a hard blow when the Frenchman came, of course, but he quickly learned that the invader would not tread roughly upon his prejudices. The privacy of his mosques was safeguarded; the tombs of his holy men were white-washed, instead of being desecrated; his priests, by whatever name called, were utilized as local magistrates and allowed to administer justice in the old way, except in the case of grave misdemeanors. The Arab soon discovered that he could even put on the white man's uniform without racial or religious dishonor—and nearly all of French Africa is to-day guarded by brown and black-skinned men with French officers. The very fact that France entrusts her empire to the arms of the conquered races is very strong evidence that she has learned how to administer government in a land of strange prejudices.

The Frenchman expects to make his colonies pay, but he does not expect to make them pay in the beginning. Instead of raising moneys for vast railroad and harbor projects by squeezing the colonies the money is raised in France and the projects quickly executed. He has confidence in the future and therefore builds immeasurably faster than a nation that takes no chances on what to-morrow may bring forth.

Stumbled on the Will.

Wills have often proved a stumbling block to the novelist. One flagrant case may be mentioned. A popular writer causes an old aristocrat to have his "last will and testament" witnessed by his butler and his housekeeper, yet he makes them both benefit under it. By so doing he renders the will invalid. But the author does not know it.

Every Woman's Privilege.

In Trouble.

"Yes," he said regretfully, "I'm in a tight corner. My sweetheart is wild on the subject of germs and microbes, and she insists that I must choose between her and my mustache. I'm to lose one or the other." "Lose the mustache, my boy." "That's just the trouble. If you ever saw me without it you'd pity my haunting fear that when it's gone I'll lose the girl too."

The Simple Answer.

A society man at a luncheon told of a well known suffragist: "She accomplishes a great deal, but some of her methods are not quite fair. A man once inquired of her husband: 'Do you give your wife an allowance, or does she ask for money when she wants it?' 'Both' was the simple answer."

In Doubt.

"Were you ever up before me?" asked a magistrate. "Sure, I don't know, yer honor. What time does your anner get up?"—London Answers.

A BALD-HEADED WOMAN.

Loss of Her Crown of Beauty, Loses in Love and Marriage.

Hair is certainly most necessary to woman. Who could love and marry a bald-headed woman? What charms could one array to offset such a disfigurement?

A woman's goal is usually love and marriage. Her crowning glory is her hair. The loss of her hair mars her beauty, happiness, and success. Yet, right here in Napanee, there are thousands of women who are neglecting or injuring their hair to such an extent that it is only a matter of time when it will be utterly ruined.

Many women destroy the beauty of their hair through thoughtlessness or ignorance of certain facts. They use curling irons over-heated, or to excess, which destroys the natural oil of the hair, causing it to split, break and come out. They do not shampoo their hair often enough, or too often. They use soaps or preparations which contain ingredients positively harmful to the scalp and hair.

As a result of such treatment dandruff is created, the hair loosens, loses color, falls out, and baldness commences, unless proper and prompt precautions are taken in time. Then certain diseases and certain diseases bring about unhealthy scalp and hair conditions.

Almost any woman may rid herself

WHO IS RIGHT?

Contradictory Statements Concerning Route to Long Life.

In these days of positive assertion and flat contradiction on the part of those who patiently search the remotest corners of our being for latent signs that they may tell us what we must do to be saved for a long and comparatively painless life, so many conflicting theories have been advanced that men are at a loss as to the safest course to pursue. For instance, we have been told that tobacco, alcohol, meat and our "wear and tear" system of rapid living were all "life-shorteners" as well as pain-producers. Now comes a learned man who, in effect, says Bosh! Of course, anyone could say that, but Dr. Marc Armand Ruffer, the Egyptian representative of the International Bureau of Hygiene, Paris, and president of the Sanitary Council of Egypt, backs up his statement with some pretty good proof.

Dr. Ruffer has been holding autopsies on very ancient mummies, dissecting the well preserved remains of Egyptian rulers, princes and day laborers who lived, toiled and died thousands of years ago and examining their arteries to see if he could find any traces of the wasting diseases and bodily decay which other scientists have always supposed were of quite modern origin (due to the wear and tear of the strenuous conditions under which we of to-day live).

A Portrait That Fascinates.

To be one of the forty immortals is the ambition of the great men of France, says the Florence correspondent of The Hamburger Fremdenblatt, and so it is the ambition of great painters—and it has been for over 500 years—to have their self-painted portraits in the gallery set aside for that purpose in Florence. The list of those who have contributed their likenesses would include hundreds whose names properly belong under the head of "great," from the wonderful girl-like head of Raphael to Josef Israels, the latest in the collection, which has a place of honor in a room all by itself. The artist has depicted himself as a very old man, with sunken cheeks, matted white beard, eyes obscured by heavy lenses and wearing a shapeless hat of uncertain color. There is nothing beautiful about it, but it fascinates the observer, who marvels at the product of old, old age.

Synonyms.

The French Canadian always has trouble with the aspirate "th." At a debating club in the province of Quebec members were required to draw a slip from a hat and debate upon the subject they received. A young countryman arose.

"I have drew the word 'bat.' I must told you dere is two, tree different kind of bat. Dere is de bat wot you play the baseball wit, de bat wot fly in de air at night and also de bat where you take de swim."—Success Magazine.

After the Honeymoon.

"Anyhow, Jack, you cannot say that I ran after you at the time of our marriage."

"You never spoke a truer word, Marla, but neither does the mousetrap run after the mouse, yet it catches it all the same."

bring about healthy scalp and hair conditions.

Almost any woman may rid herself of dandruff and diseased scalp and hair if she will but use the right remedy. We have that remedy, and we will positively guarantee that it will either cure dandruff and baldness or it will not cost the user anything.

That's a pretty broad statement, but we will back it and prove it with our own money. We will return your money if you do not find that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is an entirely satisfactory remedy that will promote hair growth and overcome scalp and hair troubles; that it will grow hair even on bald heads, unless all life in the hair roots has been extinguished, the follicles closed, and the scalp is glazed and shiny. It gets its name from the fact that it grew hair in 93 out of 100 cases, where it received a thoroughly hard, impartial, and practical test.

We want you to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic at our risk. You surely cannot lose anything by doing so, while you have everything to gain. You had better think this over, and then come in and see us about this offer. You will be well repaid for your visit to our store. Remember, you can get Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store — The Rexall Store. T. B. Wallace, Naperville.

CREEPING CACTUS.

Curious Plants That Will Travel Across a Desert.

"The isolation of the desert lowlands of Lower California, combined with alternations of long continued droughts and heavy rains, has resulted in the development of the richest and most extraordinary desert flora in the world," says E. W. Nelson in the National Geographic Magazine.

"Cactuses of many kinds abound, varying from plants standing with massive fluted trunks fifty to sixty feet tall to little straggling stemmed species too weak to hold themselves upright. The fruit of many of these cactuses is edible and much sought for by birds and mammals. They were once one of the main crops of the Indians who lived in this arid region. The cactus forests often form thorny jungles through which it is impossible to pass.

"After months among these thorny plants we supposed we had seen them in all their eccentric variations of forms. One morning, however, while crossing the Llano de Yrais, in front of Magdalena Bay, I rode out from a dense growth of bushes into an open area and pulled up my horse in amazement at sight of the most extraordinary of them all. Before me was a great bed of the creeping devil cactus, which appeared like a swarm of gigantic caterpillars creeping in all directions. These plants actually travel away from the common center of the group, and I saw many single sections twenty or thirty yards away from the others. The part of the stem resting on the ground sends down rootlets, and the older stems die in the rear at about the same rate as they grow in front, so they slowly move away from the colony across the flats where they live."

Taken at His Word.

"I note that you do not appeal as often as formerly to the plain sense of the common people."

"No," answered Senator Sorghum. "I'm afraid I overworked that figure of speech. I encouraged my constituents to such an extent that they are disposed to rely on their plain sense instead of my advice."

Wear and tear of the strenuous conditions under which we live of to-day.

Most interesting, especially to those who believe in the use of tobacco and wines in moderation, Dr. Ruffer has found that the nerves and general physical condition of modern man living under modern conditions are not a bit worse than were those of the ancient Egyptian, who didn't know anything about tobacco and consequently didn't indulge. According to the report of Dr. Ruffer, prepared for the Journal of Pathology and Bacteriology, he has learned enough from his examination of Egyptian mummies to dispose of many conflicting theories regarding arteriosclerosis and allied arterial degenerations. These wasting diseases, which have been regarded as of modern origin, have been held up as pathological "horrible examples" by anti-tobaccoists, total abstinents, diet faddists of various kinds, contemners of athletics and of the wear and tear of modern life.

Dr. Ruffer is satisfied beyond any doubt that "the old Egyptians suffered as much as we do now from arterial lesions identical with those found at present. Moreover, when we consider that few of the arteries were quite healthy, it would appear that such lesions were as frequent 3,000 years ago as they are to-day."

As to causation, Dr. Ruffer considers that tobacco can certainly be eliminated, as this drug was not used in ancient Egypt. While alcoholic beverages played a part of Egyptian social life, Dr. Ruffer holds that it is clear that the Egyptians, as a race, are not, and never have been, habitual drunkards. Moreover, Dr. Ruffer has found the disease just as common in over 800 post-mortems of Mussulmans who had certainly never touched alcohol in their lives. This fact has led him to call in question the importance of alcohol as a cause of arterial disease.

Meat is something of a luxury in Egypt, and Dr. Ruffer's experience in Egypt and the east has not strengthened the opinion that meat eating is a cause of arterial disease. Finally, he holds that strenuous muscular exercise can be excluded as a cause, for there is no evidence that ancient Egyptians were greatly addicted to athletic sports, though they liked watching professional acrobats and dancers.

The Steamboat.

Fulton himself said one day: "Neither M. Desblancs nor I invented the steamboat. If that glory belongs to any one it is to the author of the experiments at Lyons—of the experiments made in 1783 on the Saone." The one Fulton had in mind and to whom he thus generously rendered the "glory" was the Marquis de Jouffray, born in 1751, fourteen years before the year of Fulton's birth. Jouffray's claim to be regarded as the inventor of the steamboat stands thus: His vessel, built in 1783, notwithstanding its faulty construction, embodied all the elements essential to success. In it he anticipated Watts' invention of a steam engine having a constant and unremitting action. Lack of funds was the only thing that stood in the way of his getting all the honors that came later to Robert Fulton.—New York American.

A Simple Trick.

The man who cut one hole in his door for the cat and another for the kitten would find it difficult to pass a nickel through a hole the size of a dime cut in a stout piece of paper. This explains how easily it can be done. Fold the paper across the centre of the hole, place the nickel in the fold and bend the lower corners of the paper upward. This elongates the opening, and the coin falls through.

RIDING A CAMEL.

A Strenuous Task That Promotes a Love of Walking.

Riding a camel is by no means an easy or enjoyable method of locomotion, according to the description given by Mr. M. J. Randall in his book, "Sinal In Spring."

"If asked 'How do you ride a camel?' I reply invent as many attitudes as you can and employ them all in turn; adjust and readjust the rugs and cushions on which you sit; ride straight; ride crooked; ride with stirrups made of rope; ride without them; hitch first your right knee round the front pommel, then your left knee; stretch your self wide legged over the saddlebags regardless of the firearms, dates crockery, etc., which they contain until nature commands you to make a less obtuse angle; ride side saddle, if you can persuade your Bedouin that it is possible to do so without prejudice to the camel. Ride how you will and when you will, but, above all—walk. Not only is the sheik himself glad—at your suggestion, but not otherwise—to mount for awhile, but it is a lesson in graceful riding to watch him perched up there, heaven knows how, in some oriental way you have never dreamed of, and it is a lesson in courtesy to mark how at every turn of the road he offers to forego his pipe of peace—chibouk—and post of comfort and descend to the sand, leaving you to incubate his beast of burden."

A Rossini Joke.

Rossini promised a place in the opera orchestra to a trombonist and then forgot about it, says the Musical Courier. At one of his dinner parties the butler announced the visit of this same protege. Rossini hastened to welcome him and, relieving him of his instrument, disappeared a few moments, to return with his friend. Handing the instrument to the trombonist with a request to let the company hear him, Rossini prepared to listen. Trombone to lips, the musician rose—dismay, no sound, cheeks bulging, eyes distended. In vain the unhappy man makes superhuman efforts to produce harmonious sounds. At last! Oh, effort supreme! With a sound like a hoarse goose cackle there shoots from the trombone a mass of sticky macaroni. "No harm, my friend," said Rossini; "you have proved yourself a strong musician." And the next day the coveted position was offered to the trombonist.—Boston Transcript.

Sunlight and Germs.

Here is an instructive experiment made recently on the effects of sunlight. Some germs of the terrible disease, anthrax, were sown on two plates of gelatin, and while one plate was kept in the dark, the other was placed in the sunlight. The germs grew, and at the end of ten minutes there were 360 colonies or groups in the sunshine plate and 400 colonies in the dark plate.

One hour later the result was: In the sunshine plate, none; in the dark plate, 2,520. No disease germ thrives in sunlight.

Modesty is one of the sweetest and most desirable qualities one can possess, and yet too much modesty hinders advancement. When this quality is overdeveloped it antagonizes aggressiveness, without which no great success can be attained.

Facts About Motherhood

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at the time of child-birth, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when the strain is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

LYDIA B. PINKHAM

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, women will persist in going blindly to the trial. It isn't as though the experience came upon them unawares. They have ample time in which to prepare, but they, for the most part, trust to chance and pay the penalty.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia B. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy, and strong.

Any woman who would like special advice in regard to this matter is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. Her letter will be held in strict confidence.

GIFT OF A DYING TOT

Savings of a Little Child Dying of Tubercular Trouble Goes to Help the Consumptive Poor

How true it is in many different walks of life that "a little child shall lead them." We have been shown a copy of a letter written by a lady of St. John, N.B., who only a month ago lost her little child, a girl of nine years, of tubercular trouble. The mother's own words tell the story better than it can be told in any other way. She writes to the Secretary of the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives at Gravenhurst in these words: "While my loved one was ill, I one night opened some literature from you at her bedside. She asked me what it was. I told her it was a paper asking for subscriptions to the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives, and showed her the pictures in the pamphlet. She asked if she could not give what she had in her little savings bank. I told her 'Yes'—to give it to the doctor and he would send it. But she was too sick when he came again, so I am enclosing an express order for the amount I found in the bank, viz., $1.79, a small subscription, but trust you will receive it in the spirit in which it was given."

The letter is typical of many that are being constantly received at the head office of the Muskoka Hospital, 347 King St. W., Toronto. These come from all parts of Canada, for patients are received from anywhere in the Dominion. At the present time there are 128 in residence in the Muskoka Free Hospital, 128 of whom are unable to pay a

AN INSPIRING TRIBUTE.

It Made a Remarkable Scene in the House of Representatives.

A touching scene occurred in the house of representatives a number of years ago when an aged member from New Jersey arose and for the first time addressed the speaker. All eyes were turned in his direction as he stood calmly awaiting recognition. He was tall, spare and erect. His venerable appearance and kindly expression, coupled with most courteous manners, at once commanded attention.

As in husky tones he again said "Mr. Speaker" there came from the farthest end of the great hall in a whisper, but distinctly heard by all, the words, "Sweet Alice, Ben Bolt." A moment later and from the floor and gallery many voices blended in the familiar refrain, "Don't you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt?"

The ovation which immediately followed was such as is rarely witnessed in the great hall. Business was suspended for the moment and the hand of the new member warmly grasped by the chosen representatives of all parties and sections. It was an inspiring tribute, one worthily bestowed. The member was Thomas Dunn English, author of the little poem, sung in palace and cottage, which found its way into all languages and touched all hearts.—Adlai E. Stevenson in "Something of Men I Have Known."

CURIOUS ESKIMO LIVING.

The Pallet Rooms in Homes Entirely Devoid of Furnitures.

"Furniture is quite unknown in a common Eskimo home," writes the wife of the Danish governor of Greenland, Anna Bistrup, in an article on "Eskimo Women in Greenland" in the Century.

"The houses of the Eskimos are all built of stone and turf, with the windows opening toward the sun, the one entrance always being on the side that is least exposed to the wind. Along the back wall runs a platform, a pallet of boards, raised eighteen inches above the floor. It is from six to eight feet deep, and through its whole length it is divided into rooms or spaces of eight or ten feet. Each room is separated from the neighboring room by a partition of board or skin. An open passage runs the whole length of the house, the pallet rooms and serves for the traffic of all the inmates, but each pallet room claims for its own the bit of passageway adjoining.

"Each pallet room is occupied by one family, and there they stay night and day. The best pallet room is the innermost and is always occupied by the owner of the house or the oldest if the house has more than one owner."

Worthy of the Highest.

The talk had turned to the orphan children of Henry Doane of Cherryville. The former resident asked the stage driver how they had prospered.

"They've done first rate," was the hearty response. "Both of them have done first rate.

"Joe Eddie, he learned the carpenter's trade and has worked right along, and as for Emma Susan—well, I'll tell you what somebody from over the Center said to me only last week about her in conversation regarding her husband.

"Emma Susan married Frank Baxter, one of the James Baxters. Well, that man from the Center, he said to me: 'I hear Frank Baxter's been chosen selectman. Well, I don't know but what he'll do all right.'"

"My wife was greatly distressed for three years with chronic Eczema on the hands, and the disease was so severe that it almost prevented her from using her hands. The doctor gave her several ointments to use, but none of them did any good. He also advised her to wear rubber gloves and she wore out three pairs without getting any benefit. As a last resort, I persuaded her to try "Fruit-a-tives," and the effect was marvellous. Not only did "Fruit-a-tives" entirely cure the Eczema, but the Asthma, which she suffered from, was also completely cured.

We both attribute our present good health to "Fruit-a-tives." N. JOUBERT.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Eczema or Salt Rheum because "Fruit-a-tives" purifies the blood, corrects the Indigestion and Constipation, and tones up the Nervous System.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices and valuable tonics, and is the greatest of all blood-purifying remedies.

FORESTRY.

An interview with an engineer given recently in a western paper to the effect that there is abundant timber on the line of the Hudson Bay Railway is an illustration of the misapprehension in regard to this matter that exists in the public mind. Because there are large areas of land in the north on which there is timber of some kind, the conclusion is reached that it is all of present value and that the country has an unlimited supply. As a matter of fact a careful inspection of the timber along the line of the Hudson Bay Railway made in the years 1910 and 1911, by the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior, shows that there is not enough mature timber along the line of that railway to build the road. There are no prairie districts of any extent along the route, there are trees everywhere, but owing to repeated fires the forest is, except on the merest fraction of the area, too small for commercial purposes and unless it can be protected from fire until it reaches maturity, will never be of any use to the country. Explorations in other parts of the northern forested districts tell the same tale. Everywhere fire has worked the same havoc, and the forest is a mere wreck of what it might have been could fires be prevented. And unless adequate measures are taken now to protect the young and immature forests which form the major part of the stand, the outlook for the future is none too good.

If the northern forests are to continue to be a permanent source of wealth to the country, it is absolutely necessary that the fire ranging system should be extended and that proper methods of management of the forest should be applied, and public education to the value of the forest is even more necessary.

In Sweden, which has large extents of northern forest, practically uninhabited, similar to those in northern Canada, has about eliminated the fire danger in the forests, mainly by educating her people to the value of the forests.

A SECRET LIBRARY.

Important Papers That Were Stored Away by Queen Victoria.

Within the walls of Buckingham palace and constructed on the "strong room" principle is a room known as the "secret library," and in this are stored documents and private letters which were they sent forth to the world would doubtless set the whole universe talking.

From the very commencement of her reign Queen Victoria assiduously stored away in nice order all family and other important papers, her only assistant in this duty being a secretary, who entered her service within fourteen years of her accession to the throne and who retained his place until her majesty's death, though he himself had no access to nine-tenths of the papers which are docketed, the late queen alone retaining the keys of the safes and cabinets in which her "secret library" was contained.

Just before her death her majesty added to the list of her papers a batch of letters of the most private and confidential kind, addressed by the late prince consort to his private friends. It is said by those who are qualified to surmise that the "secret library" not only tells of royal marriages, births and deaths, but that it is virtually the private history of Europe during the last half of the nineteenth century.—London Tit-Bits.

European Civilization.

The first pavements in Paris were laid about the year 1200; in London, about 1417. Berlin was without pavements far into the seventeenth century. No houses had glass windows before the twelfth century, and as late as the fourteenth century anything might be thrown out of the windows of Paris and London after three times calling out, "Look out!" Shirts were not known until the time of the crusaders, and the fine clothes which ladies and gentlemen wore were seldom washed, but only occasionally "scented." So late as 1550 there were to be found in Paris but three carriages, while in England coaches date from 1580. Forks were unknown, and table manners were exceedingly "unsightly."

SOLD THE WORLD OVER.

LUGGAGE IN ENGLAND.

None of It Goes Astray Because the People Are All Very Honest.

Certain strangers within our gates have been wondering at our dealing with passengers' luggage—how much better the system of other countries, where you get a receipt and when the bag goes astray the official assures you it is impossible because there is the receipt. So you go to bed and get up and dress in your bit of paper.

Our method is insular and on the face of it chaotic. We throw our luggage to the mercy of some unknown porter. At the end of the journey we find a sort of lucky tub of portable property piled on the platform, and we plunge about and pick out what we want. You know the scene—a hundred people who have only to say "That's mine" to a strange porter in order to get it.

Thus badly stated the system looks like chaos and the invitation to a general scramble for other men's goods. In practice it works out well, for every one, from porter to passenger, is on his honor, and this is the point—luggage in England is safer than in any other civilized country.—Westminster Gazette.

More clothes are rubbed out than worn out. GOLD DUST saves rubbing and saves your clothes

Do not use Soap, Naphtha, Borax, Soda, Ammonia or Kerosene with GOLD DUST.

GOLD DUST has all desirable cleansing qualities in a perfectly harmless and lasting form. The GOLD DUST TWINS need no outside help.

GOLD DUST lathers instantly in hot or cold, hard or soft water—converts itself instantly into thick, vigorous suds that remove grease, grime and settled stains and clear out germs and impurities. It leaves only cleanliness and wholesomeness in their wake.

GOLD DUST saves you and protects your clothes from washboard wear.

Too Many Books.

Barnaby Rich in his preface to "A New Description of Ireland," published in 1800, writes: "One of the diseases of this age is the multitude of books that doth so overcharge the world that it is not able to digest the abundance of idle matter that is every day hatched and brought into the world, that are as divers in their forms as their authors be in their faces. It is but a thriftless and thoughtless occupation, this writing of books. A man were better to sit singing in a cobbler's shop, for his pay is certainly a penny a patch! But a book writer, if he gets sometimes a few commendations of the judicious, he shall be sure to reap a thousand reproaches of the malicious."

No Use.

Pocahontas had saved the life of Captain John Smith.

"What would have been the use of killing him, anyhow, pa?" she said. "There are millions of other John Smiths, and there wouldn't have been a line about it in the papers."

Her news instinct was unerring. Saving the captain's life made a first page story of the affair.—Chicago News.

Why Rheumatism Is Like Catarrh.

Both are inflammations. The former of the muscle tissues, the latter of the mucous membranes. Both are caused by uric acid in the blood, and both are permanently and economically cured by Merrill's System Tonic. This wonderful medicine, discovered by Merrill, the great Canadian chemist, has never yet failed to cure any case of these diseases where it has been tried. It is a most powerful blood purifier and tonic for the stomach, liver and kidneys, and has brought health and happiness to hundreds of homes during the last ten years. Merrill's System Tonic is an honest, harmless remedy and is worthy of your highest confidence and esteem. Get it to-day from your druggist. Three weeks' treatment in tablet form. A FAIR OFFER.

Your Money Back if You're Not Satisfied.

We pay for all the medicine used during the trial, if our remedy fails to completely relieve you of constipation. We take all the risk. You are not obligated to us in any way whatever, if you accept our offer. That's a mighty broad statement, but we mean every word of it. Could anything be more fair for you?

A most scientific, common-sense treatment is Rexall Orderlies, which are eaten like candy. There active principle is a recent scientific discovery that is odorless, colorless, and tasteless; very pronounced, yet gentle and pleasant in action, and particularly agreeable in every way. They do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, flatulence, griping, or any inconvenience whatever. Rexall Orderlies are "particularly good" for children, aged and delicate persons.

If you suffer from chronic or habitual constipation, or the associate or dependent chronic ailments, we urge you to try Rexall Orderlies at our risk. Remember, you can get them in Napanee only at our store. 12 tablets 10 cents; 36 tablets 25 cents; 80 tablets 50 cents. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. T. B. Wallace, Druggist.

Retold Stories.

The girl was telling the man an anecdote, and a queer look passed over his face. The girl stopped, embarrassed. "I am afraid I have told you this story before," she stammered.

"Yes, you have," the man admitted frankly, "but don't worry. It isn't half so bad as what happened to me yesterday. A man told me a story that I had originally told him. Worse yet, he got all mixed on it, lost the point entirely and then expected me to laugh at it."

"And you couldn't?"
"Oh, yes, I could, but not the way he thought."

Cause For Suspicion.

"George, I believe your love for me is growing cold."

"What has put such a foolish idea as that into your pretty head?"

"I notice that when I have one of my pouty spells and refuse to kiss you good-bye in the morning you don't seem to act any more as if the light had gone out of your life or even as if you didn't expect to find me here on your return."

He Got the Pin.

A fat man stooped to pick up a pin and lost his balance. An indulgent motorman, unwilling to run over the prostrate form, brought his car to a sudden stop at a place where the power rail was out, and a bystander figured that for five minutes there was a blockade of 100 trolley cars, fifty automobiles and taxicabs and several thousand people. The man got the pin.

Hennequin's Infant Tablets

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she "could not live." The Tablets cured her.—Mrs. E. R. McBurnie, Napier, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—Mrs. JAMES RIPPDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and present them. If your baby is not well send for trial package.

It may be to the end that the German people will not object to heavy military expenses that German army officers are inclined to agree with experts of other countries in giving an exceptionally high rating to the French military establishment. When the Moroccan incident made war a subject of discussion the question of the relative strength of the two countries chiefly concerned in the controversy naturally came up for so-called expert consideration. The opinion then was set forth that in only one arm were the Germans superior, and in that, the infantry, only numerically.

In artillery and cavalry the French were rated in advance of anything in Europe, and their infantry was held only numerically inferior to the German. The unstable character of the French government and its difficulties regarding military policy offered little justification for this opinion, but the experts found warrant for their ideas in the admirable equipment and training of the army. Germans now endeavor to call the attention of their people to the increasing French superiority in the "fourth arm," the aviation corps, an arm which they say exists in fact as well as name. A retired German naval officer, Capt. von Pustau, reporting on the French autumn manoeuvres, says:

"If the results of these experiments justify the hopes that have been founded on them, we need no longer indulge in illusions, but must confess that the brilliant and well thought out organization of French aeronautics constitutes a very grave danger for us. If, furthermore, our neighbors continue to progress at the same rate as in 1910-11, and if they maintain their advance on us, I do not hesitate to proclaim that in the next war this inferiority will lead as straight to a catastrophe."

Probably the underlying idea of this and other cautioning advice is that military confidence can grow to a point where it ceases to have virtues.

In connection with the discussion of the possibilities of employing convicts on farms, attention has been called recently to the successful experiment of New Zealand along this line. In 1900 the government of that country decided to try the employment of prison labor in the afforestation scheme. Four prison camps were established—two in the north and two in the south island. One camp was closed after a few years, the other three have since been maintained and are considered highly valuable to-day. The sites for the camps are at a considerable distance from towns or villages and in healthful districts. The convicts, under conditions that almost amount to freedom, have planted

Nature's Patent Office.

PRINCIPLES OF MANY MECHANICAL DEVICES MAN CLAIMS AS HIS INVENTIONS SHE HAS ALWAYS USED.

Did you ever realize that Nature has a patent office so full of inventions that man would be at a loss to get along without them, and if he had to pay royalties on all of them the price of the necessities of life would be greatly increased thereby? Long before man took to inventing labor-saving devices Nature had worked out many of the greatest inventions of the age, says the World To-day. It would go hard with some inventors if there was a law preventing infringement upon Nature's patents.

The curious thing about it is, however, that man has laboriously thought out his great inventions through the centuries, while all the time Nature had them ready for his study if he had only the eyes to see. It is only in recent years that we have fully appreciated the fact that all about us are scattered devices which serve as the foundation of most of our great mechanical principles.

For instance, the first block and tackle, which we employ so generally to-day, was created in the eye of the first man born on earth. This block and tackle controls the movement of the eyeballs, and is a perfect miniature of those used in ordinary mechanical fields. If the first inventor of this labor-saving device had understood the physiology of the body as we know it to-day he would have been saved many days and nights of hard thought and experiment.

THE FIRST PUMP EVER MADE, and the most wonderful and powerful in existence, is the heart. For its size it has a greater efficiency than any pump invented by man. There are all the principles of the modern force pump in the heart and it is marvelously up to date, despite its ancient origin. But for centuries inventions struggled with the pump, improving it slowly and discovering the elementary laws governing it. How much easier it would have been for them if they could have taken the human heart and studied it carefully! The force pump would then have been invented or copied complete.

When you pick up tools and use them you will find that many of them have what is called the ball-and-socket joint. This enables one to perform mechanical labor in an easy and efficient way. Half of our tools and machines would be pretty clumsy affairs without this little inventive device. Yet Nature knew of this invention long before man discovered it, and she utilized it in the construction of the human frame. We have, after all, the most remarkable ball-and-socket device ever invented right in our bodies. We could not swing our arms without it. Our shoulder bones swing back and forth on the ball-and-socket arrangements which no one has ever yet surpassed. Even the modern invention of ball bearing was anticipated by Nature. The vertebrae of the snake consist of a long chain of balls and sockets which work on the principle of the ball bearings

Man to-day is going more and more to Nature to learn secrets that are of interest to the mechanical and industrial world. It has long been a mistake to suppose these little creatures are of value only to the specialist interested in cataloguing and mounting specimens. We knew, for instance, that the earwigs carry about with them a dainty pair of forceps, and that efficient pliers, pincers and scissors are part of the equipment of other insects.

was the balloon or "swellfish," as we know that the first airship was a bird or flying insect. Indeed, our whole advance in aviation has been based upon a close study of birds and insects. At first we studied only the birds, but now we are making a more exhaustive study of the insects. The common beetle is constructed on the plan of a biplane, and the birds on that of the monoplane. There is a big distinction between them, and this fact has opened up a new field of study and experiment.

The lungs were the first pair of bellows, and their construction might well be studied by builders of forge and blacksmith's bellows. The jaw is a perfect illustration of the lever principle of mechanics. For its size the jaw of any of our wild animals is the most marvelous application of this mechanical principle. The bones of the human body are fashioned with the idea of greatest of getting the greatest amount of strength and stiffness with a minimum of material. Engineers long ago recognized the value of a hollow tube in securing rigidity with lightness, but this principle was well known to Nature, and she availed herself of it in building the bones of our legs and arms.

The first great chemical factory of the world was the liver and stomach of man and animals. We are just beginning to learn the secrets of chemical action and reaction which Nature has been using for ages in the human stomach. Enough poisons are generated there every day to kill a dozen men, but Nature has supplied the antidotes, so that we rarely suffer, except from excessive eating and drinking. There is in the system a network of which for ages baffled all scientific investigators as to their meaning and use. Now we know that they constitute the first and greatest spirit-level ever made. Without this spirit-level we would not be able to balance ourselves. When the body is bent or tipped over a little this spirit-level immediately informs the brain, and the proper set of muscles are called into play to prevent our falling. We may think it is our organs of vision that tell us when the body is in danger of toppling over, but it is in reality the spirit-level which works in the eyes as well and satisfactorily when the eyes are closed. We say we know instinctively when we are losing

ONE FEATURE OF THE WAR

OUTLOOK FOR EUROPEANS IN THE INTERIOR.

The Shortest Way To Paradise Is Through Slaughter of Unbelievers.

No man can surely forecast the outcome of the present situation in Turkey. More potent forces than the official acts of governments are at work there. The two major passions of the Turkish Empire have been aroused—religious fanaticism and zeal for the territorial integrity of the nation.

On this latter issue the Young Turk Party has staked its existence. The advent of the constitution deeply stirred this feeling for the integrity of the Empire among all Ottomans. Even British control of Egypt over which the Sultan exercises nominal sway became at once a sensitive subject. Now the loss of Tripoli to Italy is a ranking wound that will not heal so long as Turkey remains a nation—which may not be for long.

America and Europe take their religion so casually, and tolerance is so thoroughly ingrained in the Western character, that it is difficult for dwellers in this part of the world to realize the intensity and bitterness of the religious bigotry that exists in the Turkish empire. Religion is the first consideration to orientals. Especially is this so in the case of Moslems. Mohammed himself taught enmity to other religions as a cardinal article of the faith. The shortest prescribed route to Paradise was by the slaughter of unbelievers. Islam made its first and greatest conquests by the sword; and the devout and orthodox among the faithful believe that programs cannot be improved upon.

of cleavage between the people of the Turkish Empire is religion. Fundamentally there are only two classes in the Sultan's domains, Moslems and non-Moslems. The color line is practically non-existent; the black and white go to the mosques as brethren and unite in common worship at Mecca. Racial lines mean little, and the most cosmopolitan gathering on earth is probably that about the Kaaba at Mecca. The Moslem's religion is all in all to him.

It is always possible to make a religious appeal in the affairs of Turkey. A holy war is a grim possibility in its largest relation to world politics; but what is more tangible, it is a dreadful reality to the Christians in many parts of Turkey. The Adana massacres of only three years ago show that these feasts of blood are possible even under a constitutional form of government. Asia Minor is sprinkled with Armenian orphans whose parents have been slain because they were Christians. The fact that the present war has broken out during Ramadan, the Moslem Lent, when the people are most fanatical, increases the delicacy of the present situation. A terrible powder magazine is very close to-day to the fire of religious fanaticism.

The Moslem is not a dreamer; he believes in the argument of the sword, and in the Turkish Empire highly valuable to-day. The sites to the camps are at a considerable distance from towns or villages and in healthful districts. The convicts, under conditions that almost amount to freedom, have planted several hundred thousand trees and have been greatly benefited as to health.

There is no competition with skilled labor, inasmuch as the men are employed under conditions that would not attract free laborers. Most of them have learned something of a useful occupation, besides developing healthy bodies under the open-air life. Perhaps there is a lesson in this for many parts of this country. Municipal farms ought to be possible with us, so managed as to be profitable and to teach the prisoners employed on them something that will be useful to them in later life. Why not try the experiment where there is a large number of convicts or vagrants?

THE TOLL OF THE JUNGLE.

Loss of Life by Wild Beasts in India Caused by Floods.

India still pays its annual tribute of human life to the jungle. In fact, the number of deaths from snake-bite or the attacks of wild animals has steadily increased during the last three years—a fact which the London Times attributes to the great floods. The rising waters have driven the serpents out of the lowlands, up into the villages, and have diminished, through drowning, the natural food-supply of the larger wild beasts.

In 1910 fifty-five persons were killed by elephants, twenty-five by hyenas, one hundred and nine by bears, three hundred and fifty-one by leopards, three hundred and nineteen by wolves, eight hundred and fifty-three by tigers, and six hundred and eighty-eight by other animals, including wild pigs. No less than twenty-two thousand four hundred and seventy-eight died from the bite of poisonous snakes. The grand total of mortality is twenty-four thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight.

During the same year thirty-three thousand cattle were also killed by wild beasts or snakes.

The losses on the part of the inhabitants of the jungle were nearly but not quite as great as those of their human enemies and the domesticated animals combined. Ninety-one thousand one hundred and four snakes and over nineteen thousand wild beasts of various kinds were killed.

The Times also reports that a great many cases of snake-bite were successfully treated with the Brunton lancet and permanganate of potash, but that it is, nevertheless, impossible to assert the value of this treatment, since no one knows whether all—or even a very large number—of the cases treated were caused by the bites of really venomous snakes.

Flowers of speech are not acceptable praise, save they exhale the sweet fragrance of love.

which one has never yet surpassed. Even the modern invention of ball bearing was anticipated by snails. The snail consists of a long chain of balls and sockets which work on the principle of the ball bearings of our bicycles and automobiles.

Many inventions are so common that we do not stop to inquire about their origin, but you can rest assured that their construction by primitive man was not a simple or easy matter. Working in the dark, he must often have stumbled upon mechanical principles by accident, or possibly he copied some of his ideas from Nature. For instance,

THE FIRST AND BEST HINGE ever made was found in an oyster. Take the horny oyster of the Pacific coast and examine its shells. They are put together and held there by a perfect hinge, which cannot be surpassed in efficiency by any found in your hardware store.

Recently there have been put on the market small boxes and receptacles which cannot roll off a shelf or table. These boxes are made to contain small particles, such as fine gold dust, diamond chips or any small article of value. They cannot roll off because of their peculiar oval construction. If you hit them they roll around and around instead of off the shelf. A great invention, you say. But it was a secret only to man. Nature made the original of this box in the first egg of the murre. You cannot knock one of those eggs off a table very easily, for it will roll around and around instead of off. This principle has now been applied to the construction of many small articles for desk use.

Electricity gives us light practically without heat—an ideal method of illumination. But the lantern fly of tropical America was in the field long before we invented and constructed the electric lamp. Nature built the electric battery long before man thought of it, in the head of the electric eel and the torpedo fish. These creatures are capable of giving an electric shock of considerable force. In the head of

THE TORPEDO FISH there are vertical columns of electrical plates which number as many as half a million. The plates or disks are separated by delicate membranes, which insulate them, and they resemble very much the ordinary voltaic pile so commonly used in electrical work.

Even our sewing and spinning machines had their prototypes in Nature. The tailor-bird was the first seamstress, and it stitched its leaves together perfectly long before man used the fish bone as a needle to sew the skin garments together. It is possible that the ancients got their first lesson in this art from the tailor-bird. Then as to spinning the caterpillars and silkworms were ahead of our machines, and the spider even to-day gives us lessons in this art. No skill of man has yet equaled the fine spinning of the spider. We cannot begin to make threads as fine and small as the spider's, nor can we weave them into such a fine, tough rope. These insects are supplied with machinery for spinning that is still little understood. Under the ultramicroscope we may yet discover some new principle of the art that will greatly help us to improve our spinning methods.

think it is our organs of vision that tell us when the body is in danger of toppling over, but it is in reality the inner ear which works as well and satisfactorily when the eyes are closed. We say we know instinctively when we are losing our balance, but this instinct is simply another name for a proper working of our spirit-level.

In a remarkable way Nature has conserved her resources and adopted the most effective way of achieving results. Consider the trees of the forest. What an enormous wind pressure there is brought to bear upon a large, leafy tree. A flagpole with half that amount of pressure would snap off. Then why do not the trees break oftener in windstorms? Because the bark binds the tissues of the wood together so that they cannot slip and slide beyond a certain point—a device which is frequently resorted to in mechanics to secure great resisting strength. With wedges we split rocks and stones, but Nature can split the hardest and strongest material with a growing vine that steadily but persistently pushes its way up through a minute crevice. That is the first and greatest wedge ever invented. A growing acorn can split asunder the stoutest pavement or raise a ton rock from its bed in the soil.

There is nothing so promising to the inventor as a careful study of the whole broad field of Nature.

Useful Hints for the

CONSTRUCTING A SILO.

The importance and value of the silo in furnishing succulent food for dairy cows and other farm animals is now being more generally appreciated. Only a trial is necessary to convince stock raisers that silage is an economical feed for the production of beef as well as for the production of milk. Silage when included in the ration for steers makes it more palatable, and in this manner is an active agent in bringing about more rapid gains. Also in many cases well preserved silage has been found a cheap and successful feed for sheep, swine and horses, writes Mr. J. B. Davidson. The silo may be made an ornament to any group of farm buildings. Its form is such that it may be made to add to the appearance of any style of construction. One or more conical silo roofs when viewed from a distance; or in the full height of the curved walls at a closer range, gives a very pleasing effect when placed in a setting of rectangular buildings.

It is the purpose of any silo, regardless of its construction, to exclude air as far as possible from the silage, and in this way prevent decay. To prevent the air from reaching the silage, all silos must have air-tight walls. These must be rigid enough not to be sprung out of shape by the pressure of the silage, permitting air to enter next to the wall. Not only the walls but the doors, also, must be perfectly air-tight. To accomplish this they should be well fitted and the joints made perfect by felt pads or gaskets. It is a good practice where the silo door sets against a shoulder, to place clay worked into the consistency of putty in the joint. The clay is placed on the bearing surface and the door placed over it, and when the pressure of the silage comes against the door an air-tight joint is obtained. Tar paper is successfully used by some silo owners; either in strips to cover the cracks around the doors or in widths sufficient to cover the entire door and lap a few inches on the silo walls. Not only should the walls be tight and rigid, but they should also be perfectly smooth on the inside to permit the silage to settle without forming air pockets, which cause a certain amount of the ad-

of North Africa. These desert rangers hold the holy law in its simplicity. They scorn the tolerance and compromises of City Moslems. They would make no peace with unbelievers, and they still cherish the ancient dream of world conquest by the sword.

A DESERT ARSENAL.

What makes Tripoli a special danger point at the present time is that it is the home of the Senussi movement. This organization, modeled somewhat on the lines of a secret society, has existed for nearly 100 years and its center has been an oasis called Jerabub in the desert of Tripoli. From this remote spot its emissaries have reached out to the bounds of the Islamic world. High and low, statesmen and dervishes, have been enrolled in its membership. It has wealth and power beyond the imagination of those who look upon it as a mere aggregation of fanatical Arabs.

For several years past the Senussi have been gathering a great store of modern weapons at Jerabub. These have come in from Europe through the port of Tripoli and their number and character are known to no white man by actual sight, for no Christian has ever gone to Jerabub and come out alive. The secret service, however, of the French, Italian and British government are well aware of this desert arsenal. Lately the aggressions of France have caused the removal of the Senussi quarters from Jerabub to Kufra, an oasis in the Sahara desert under the Egyptian flag.

This ominous fact lets a flood of light in upon the news dispatches that hosts of Arabs whose delight is blood letting have gathered in the hinterland of Tripoli. These are little for the peace pacts of nations. Italy is a Christian power; it has affronted the sultan, who is the caliph of all the faithful; therefore they will fight. Woe unto any European caught in the interior of Tripoli.

The fires of religious hatred are being assiduously fanned by Turkish leaders. The people have been gathering in the mosques for their mass meetings, which is

A DANGEROUS SIGN.

Even the Mohammedans of India have been stirred to the point of appealing to the British government to come to the help of Turkey. This deep religious fanaticism may break upon travelers, missionaries and all other people who visit the empire. For bigotry is unreasonable and the average Moslem is ignorant beyond the understanding of the West. The first to feel this Mohammedan fury, especially in Asia Minor and Syria, will be the Christians known as Latins, so-called to distinguish them from the Greek Catholics who are even more numerous in Turkey. Italy is the capital of the Latin church. The Roman Catholic orders have a long chain of successful missions and schools in the empire, especially in the Holy Land. The danger to these is very real at the present time.

While these distinctions between Christian bodies are sometimes made by Moslems as a whole, the one broad and sufficient classification is Christian. All Christians in the Turkish empire are in more or less danger at the present time, whether they be Latins, Greeks, Protestants, Armenians, Maronites, Syrians, Copts, Chaldeans or Abyssinians.

FEEDING A SHIP'S FURNACE

THE STRESS AND STRAIN OF THE STOKER'S CALLING.

He is Subject to Many and Great Dangers on the Huge Battleship.

"Full speed ahead! Shake her up!" shouts the navigating lieutenant on the bridge of the battleship. The listener hears the "ding-dong" of the engine-room telegraph-bell as the indicator is swung over to the extreme point of the dial; the engineer below pulls a huge lever, and opens the throttle-valve to admit more steam to the engine, and the vessel lashes the sea into an angry foam as its propellers thrust it forward through the waves, says London Answers.

That is the outward and visible part of the execution of the order, but deep down in the hull of the ship, perhaps below the water-line, there are souls to whom the command is quite as significant, and upon whom the officer is dependent for the extra speed he requires.

Working in white duck trousers, often stripped to the waist, the stokers perspire freely at they trim the coal, bank the fires, and generally arrange for the replenishing of the energy which the ocean greyhound is expending.

THE KING IN THE STOKEHOLD

The temperature is high; the working space is necessarily confined, and the hard, manual labor is intensified by the action of the bending required for the work.

The engineers and shipbuilders have carried out their contract, the artificers have tended and kept every part of the mighty machine in perfect order, but it depends upon the stoking to produce the speed from the vessel which it was intended she should attain.

His Majesty King George popularized himself among the stoker ratings of the Service when, on his trip to Canada, he went below and joined the men making up the fires of the Indomitable, and there is no doubt that his Majesty realized in practical fashion the value of the work carried on, unseen on deck, at all the battle practices and manoeuvres.

QUALIFICATIONS AND PAY.

Stokers do not join the Services as boys, like seamen; they are recruited between the ages of 18 and 23 years (25 in special cases) from able-bodied men who can pass the physical tests and standards.

They sign on for either a period of twelve years as "continuous" stokers, or as "special service" stokers for five years with the active fleet and seven with the Royal Fleet Reserve.

They are not required to be trained men, as the work requiring extra skill is performed by artificers, but they are sent to an establishment such as the Victory, at Portsmouth, to be taught their duties.

They receive a free kit on entry, and no charge is made for rations. Their pay rises from 9s. 11d. per week to 38s. 6d., the latter being the amount which can be saved by chief petty officer stokers.

TESTED RECIPES.

Minced Turkey in Potato Cups.—Dice fine some slices of cold roast turkey, add a little dressing to give flavor and moisten with gravy. Prepare some nicely seasoned mashed potato, stir in a beaten egg, and form into small balls. Hollow out the centers with a spoon. Fill with turkey mixture and set in oven till heated through. Garnish with parsley and serve with giblet loaf.

Cranberry Pie.—Mix well together two level tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, one cupful of sugar, a pinch of salt, moisten with a little cold water and cook five minutes. Add one-half cupful of raisins, seeded and chopped, and one and a half cupfuls of chopped cranberries. Simmer for fifteen minutes, pour into a baked crust, cover with the white of an egg beaten stiff with one tablespoonful of sugar, and brown lightly in the oven. This pie has the flavor of cherries.

Fig and Prune Pudding.—One-fourth pound of well washed dried figs chopped fine, one dozen cooked prunes drained from their syrup and stones removed, the rind and juice of one lemon or one tart orange, one-quarter of a grated nutmeg, one-quarter pound of suet (chopped fine), one-half teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of brown sugar, two cupfuls of bread crumbs, one tablespoonful of flour, two eggs. Steam three hours in a well greased, tightly covered mold. Serve with whipped cream sweetened and flavored with vanilla. Decorate the pudding with a few cooked prunes. Dip half lumps of sugar in brandy—one for each guest—arrange on top of pudding, and light just before placing on table. Let each guest choose one and make a wish. The lump of sugar burning longest will indicate success.

Stuffed Beef Heart.—In these days of high priced meats one can make many savory dishes of inexpensive bits. Take a beef heart, clean it carefully, fill with a dressing made as for chicken or turkey. Use an equal amount of mashed potatoes and bread crumbs, seasoned with sage, summer savory, pepper, and salt, and moistened with beef drippings or butter, and add one or two chopped onions. Fasten together with skewers or twine, steam four hours and bake one hour and a half, basting well. Make a thickened gravy of the drippings.

CRANBERRIES.

Jellied Cranberry.—Wash and look over one quart of berries. Sprinkle over them one pint of sugar and one-half pint of water. Cook slowly. When they begin to boil cover over a few moments and cook until tender, but do not allow skins to break. Pour into a mold. The juice will be firm, inclosing the berries, which makes an attractive and delicious dinner accompaniment.

Candied Cranberries.—This is one strong, hot coffee, one cupful of flour and one teaspoonful of baking powder. Add the beaten whites of the eggs and bake in three layers for fifteen or twenty minutes. Fill with whipped cream.

APPLE JELLY.

Apple and Mint Jelly.—Two pounds of "greening" apples, green color paste, two bunches of garden mint, one-half cup sugar to each cup of juice, juice of one lemon. Cut the apples in small pieces and add a little water; when partly cooked add the mint leaves, which have been washed, dried, and chopped fine. Strain when soft, keeping the juice that runs through first separate from that which is pressed through, as the first juice makes the clearer jelly. Measure the juice and add equal parts of sugar in the proportion stated; boil to the jelly state. A short time before it is done add the lemon juice and color paste.

Quince and Apple Jelly.—Cut the apple in large pieces, the quince very small, as it takes longer cooking than the apple if otherwise prepared. Cook with a little water until soft. Strain, add equal proportions of sugar and cook to the jelly state, skimming frequently.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

When blacking a kitchen range mix the blacklead with vinegar, if you want it to have a really good polish.

Slices of cold pork, seasoned with pepper and salt, fried on both sides, and served with apple sauce, will make a tasty dish.

When boiling rice add lemon juice to the water to make the grains white, and prevent them sticking together.

Finely chopped cabbage scattered over carpets before sweeping is a wonderful cleanser, and to be preferred to tea leaves.

Select lamp wicks which are soft and loosely woven. Soak them in vinegar, and dry in a cool oven before using.

Save the water that meat, fish, haricot beans, or rice have been boiled in. It contains nourishment, and is an excellent foundation for soups.

Save fat from soup, clarify it, and you will have the wherewithal for basting meat and frying vegetables.

Dusting, or rather good dusting, is an art! A slightly moistened duster in the left hand and a dry duster in the right, if well used, will collect the dust, and leave a perfectly clean surface.

or the Tiller of the Soil

joining silage to rot. Several failures have been caused by a shoulder being made where the walls join the foundations. The foundation wall, and in fact the walls of the entire silo, should be as smooth as possible. If due care is used in tramping the silage, the filling doors which extend into the silo are not a serious objection, though perfectly flush doors are certainly an advantage. A vertical wall is the only satisfactory wall to use, as a wall inclined outward will support the silage to a certain extent and prevent it settling satisfactorily, thus creating air pockets. When the wall is inclined inward the silage will settle away from it. In the case of concrete silos with tapered walls, these should be vertical on the inside.

Best results are obtained where the silage is uniformly distributed throughout the silo and is carefully packed near the walls and around the doors by tramping. Care should be taken that the heavy and light silages shall be uniformly mixed. The silo owners are of the opinion that a great amount of tramping is unnecessary, but the investigations of the writers would indicate that where tramping was not followed there was always a certain amount of spoiled silage and that the money spent for labor used in thoroughly tramping the silage in the silo when filled brought good returns.

In localities where freezing occurs, it is necessary to construct the silo so as to prevent, so far as possible, freezing of the silage. It is difficult to make a comparison between the merits of the various types of silos in this respect, owing to the inability to find them under like conditions. Freezing of silage is due to loss of heat, first through the silo wall; second, to the air in contact with the feeding surface. The first loss may be remedied by using a non-conducting wall in the silo, and the second by preventing the circulation of air above the silage in the silo.

Any kind of an air space will partially prevent freezing, depending upon how little the air circulates in this space and also upon how much conducting material is required to tie the outer and inner walls together.

Their pay rises from 9s. 11d. per week to 38s. 6d., the latter being the amount which can be earned by chief petty officer stokers.

Man who show special intelligence or mechanical ability are given the opportunity of becoming "mechanicians," which branch of the Service opens up for them a more promising career. Those chosen are given a short course of special instruction, and after passing an examination are able to earn from 31s. 6d. to 45s. 6d. per week.

Extra pay can also be earned when serving in torpedo-boats or in the tropics, and there are opportunities of adding to the amount by becoming engineers' writers or yeoman of stores.

THE WELL-TRAINED MAN.

As in other branches, the stokers get extra allowances for good conduct, so that they can obtain a good remuneration for their services, with the promise of a pension upon leaving.

The duties are undoubtedly arduous and dangerous, but there is usually a good, steady influx of desirable recruits willing to undertake them, and many who are today tending boilers and engines in civil establishments learned their tasks in the first instance in the Royal Navy in their early days, upon which they look back with pride.

Many employers in our cities show a marked preference for ex-members of the Service, knowing that the sense of discipline has been firmly grafted in anyone who has served therein. The Navy Employment Agency finds positions for hundreds of men annually, while many Government posts are reserved for ex-naval stokers and seamen.

WHY FRENCH ARE POLITEST.

Acquire Their Good Breeding From Earliest Childhood.

The reason that the French people enjoy the well earned reputation of being the politest people in the world is because "la politesse," or good breeding, is an accomplishment they always acquire at home and in childhood. A Frenchman, his wife, and a couple of children will observe all the most exquisite social amenities in the privacy of their own home, and the family life presents all the social advantages they require. A French boy of even the humblest parentage does not wait to go out in the world to learn how to offer a woman a chair, give an elderly gentleman his arm, invite you to dine, or discover the topics of conversation that engage your interest. He has lived from his babyhood in an atmosphere of family deference and cheerful unselfish consideration, and he is charmingly polite by precept and example wherever he may find himself.

It takes a clever child to refrain from saying cute things.

the tender, but do not allow skins to break. Pour into a mold. The juice will be firm, inclosing the berries, which makes an attractive and delicious dinner accompaniment.

Candied Cranberries—This is one of the most delicious and prettiest ways of using the cranberry, and especially good to serve with fowl. Take one quart of berries and select baking pan that will hold them evenly on the bottom so that the berries will not be on top of each other. Cover with ten cups of sugar and water enough to come about one-third the height of the berry and bake slowly until the berries are tender, and they must retain their shape. Pile on a glass dish. They should look like candied cherries, with a small amount of thick syrup, and should be a scarlet color.

Spiced Cranberries—One pint of berries, one cup of sugar, one-half cup of water, one half cup of raisins, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one-fourth teaspoon cloves, two teaspoons vinegar. Cook slowly and when nearly done add one-half cup of chopped walnuts. A splendid relish for meats.

New York Cranberry Sauce—Put in kettle with one pint of water and four sliced tart apples. Cover and cook twenty minutes. Press through a colander, add one pound of sugar (or two cups) and boil five minutes longer.

Thick Cranberry Jelly—Wash one quart of berries, add one pint of water, and boil five minutes. Press through a sieve, return to kettle, and add one pound of sugar. Stir until sugar has dissolved, boil for a minute, and turn into a mold. Stand over night in a cool place before serving.

UNUSUAL RECIPES

Butter Scotch Pie—Melt thoroughly together two cupfuls of light brown sugar and one large tablespoonful of butter, to this add one cupful hot water or milk and yolks of two or three eggs, four tablespoonfuls of flour and a pinch of salt. Beat the whites of the eggs with a little powdered sugar and spread over the tops.

To Crystallize Grapes—Take one-half cup of sugar and one-fourth cup of hot water and boil slowly until syrup is nearly evaporated, then carefully dip the bunch of grapes into it, roll them in coarse granulated sugar, and set them on a buttered paper to dry.

Grape Fruit Salad—Remove the pulp of a grapefruit, lay it on lettuce, add a few malaga grapes which have been seeded and a few English walnuts, and serve with mayonnaise dressing.

CAKES.

Coffee Cake—One cupful of sugar, one cupful of molasses, one cupful of coffee, one-half cupful of butter, one cupful of raisins, one-half cupful of currants, four cupfuls of flour, one egg, one teaspoonful of cloves, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one teaspoonful of soda.

Crumb Cake—One-half cupful of molasses, one-half cupful of cream, one-half cupful of milk, four eggs, yolks and whites beaten together, one cupful of sugar, three good cupfuls of crumbs, one teaspoonful of baking powder, cinnamon and cloves to taste.

Mocha Layer Cake—The yolks of five eggs, one cupful of powdered sugar, two tablespoonfuls of mocha essence, two tablespoonfuls of the dust, and leave a perfectly clean surface.

To clean a straw hat is not a difficult matter. Mix a teaspoonful of powdered sulphur with the juice of a lemon. Brush the mixture well into the hat, then rinse under the tan and set in the air to dry.

If your iron sticks rub it on brown paper which has been previously rubbed with yellow soap.

It will be economy to finish your sheets with the same width hem at each end. By so doing they can be used either side up, and gain much wear.

Grated cheese is more digestible than plain cheese, moreover, it makes a prettier dish. Serve a small dish of it for the cheese course and see how it will be appreciated.

Imitation Frosted Glass—Mix Epsom salts with a weak solution of gum, and apply with a rag. Or mix putty with linseed oil till of the consistency of thin cream, and paint it on the glass.

Here is a new mousetrap. Put a small piece of cheese in the centre of a sheet of sticky fly paper and place it where the mouse is most likely to go and let it lie there and you are sure to get Mr. Mouse. FAR-TRAVELLED NAMES.

Familiar Everyday Words Have Come Long Distances.

Calico takes its name from Calicut, a city in India. Satin is from Zaytoon, in China. Damask was first made at Damascus, in Syria. Gauze is from Gaza, in Palestine; and baize from Baza, in Spain. Dimity is called after Damiatta, in Egypt. Cambrie was first made at Cambria, in France, and pauslin at Mosul, in Asia.

Serge got its name from Xergy, a Spanish word. Velvet is our equivalent of the Italian word velluto; and gingham is from Gingamp, a town in Brittany, where the cloth was first used for umbrella covers.

Cashmere gets its name from the valley of Cashmere, in the Himalayas, buckram from Bokhara, lawn from Laon in France, and khaki is the Indian word for earth.

But we have many home-made names of fabrics. Tweed was originally the product of the weavers of the Tweed, melton was first made at the town of that name, in Leicestershire. Worsted is from Worstead, famed for its fine wool yarns. Cheviot was originally a cloth made from the wool of the Cheviot Hills; and blankets got their name from their original English manufacturer—Thomas Blanket.

Mrs. Perrin of Lindsay Looking After Big English Fortune.

A despatch from Brantford says: Josiah Armitage, acting for his sister, Mrs. J. J. Perrin of Lindsay, is here looking up members of the Perrin family, the members of which, according to a recent despatch from San Jose, Cal., are heirs to four and a half millions, which have accumulated in England in the past two hundred years. Mrs. Perrin is the wife of the late John James Perrin, said to have been a cousin of Drs. Charles and Thomas Perrin, who are direct heirs to the estate. Prior to the announcement made from California she had sent a lawyer to England to inquire into the fortune. Mrs. Perrin says that direct trace of her family is available back as far as 1777.

MAKING SAFE INVESTMENTS

THE YIELD ON MUNICIPAL BONDS DEPENDS ON SAFETY AND POPULARITY OF BOND.

Small Issues Usually Have to Yield Higher Than Large—Safety of Interest Depends Entirely on Safety of Principal—Canadian Municipal Issues Yield Lower Return Than American—Western School Issues.

The articles contributed by "Investor" are for the purpose of guiding prospective investors, and, if possible of saving them from losing money through placing it in "wild-cat" enterprises. The impartial and reliable character of the information may be relied upon. The writer of these articles and the publisher of this paper have no interests to serve in connection with this matter other than those of the reader.

Turning from the question of safety of principal of municipal bonds to the other features, which must be considered when investing in accordance with actual requirements, we come to the item of certainty of interest. This, of course, depends in the case of this class of bonds on the same consideration which tends to insure safety of principal, and where we find reason to consider the safety of sum invested ample we have no occasion to enquire further as to the possibility of non-payment of interest. In the case of Campbellton, N. B., for instance, where the total destruction of the town by fire rendered precarious the safety of the bonds, the action of the government of the Province alone saved the interest from defaulting, just as it was the same government's guarantee that enabled the town to make another issue of bonds since the fire at a very favorable rate. These investors eagerly purchased.

The rate of income from municipals is relatively small, except when one considers their relatively high degree of safety. This question of relative safety is one very good reason why Canadian municipalities sell their bonds at much more advantageous prices than do municipalities of corresponding size and prospects to the south of the International Boundary. For example, City of New York bonds sell slightly under par to yield about 4.05 per cent., whereas, Toronto bonds sell above par—for the 4 per cent.—to yield 3.90 per cent. And other cities are in proportion. The very fact cited last week that repudiation of municipal obligations was so infrequent in Canada as to be negligible—while in the States it is a very present danger at all times in investing and is ample reason for the difference.

To some degree, however, the rate of interest and the yield—the difference has been pointed out several times in this column—varies—in the words of mathematics—inversely as the safety. That is to say, the lower the safety the greater the yield. This is only true in part. A small issue of bonds must usually yield a higher rate of income than a large one; for in the first place, they are nearly as much trouble for a bond dealer to handle, and then the town, not being well known—or of course it would be large enough to make a large issue—is not popular with investors if they can get the bonds of a more important place at the same price. This is particularly noticeable in the case of small Western rural municipalities and school district issues. The safety of those school district securities is of quite a high class and yet for the chief reason that they are unknown, often yield as high as 6 per cent and some-

OPENING OF PARLIAMENT

Everything Combined to Appearance of H. F.

A despatch from Ottawa, says: Special eclat marked the formal opening of the first session of the twelfth Parliament of the Dominion, on Thursday, owing to the circumstance that for the first time in the history of the Dominion, the Vice-regal throne in the Senate chamber was occupied by a Prince of the blood, who read the speech from the throne, first in English and then in faultless French, much to the delight of the French-Canadian members of the House.

TEXT OF ADDRESS.

The address reads: Honorable gentlemen of the Senate, gentlemen of the House of Commons:

It is with much satisfaction that I meet for the first time the Parliament of Canada, and avail myself of your advice and assistance in fulfilment of the important charge which has been entrusted to me by his majesty the King. I can assure you that I esteem it a privilege to be called upon to administer to the affairs of this prosperous and growing Dominion, and to associate myself with you in the important duties which you are about to approach.

It affords me great pleasure to congratulate you upon the continued and increasing prosperity of the country. Our trade, both with British and with foreign countries, is rapidly expanding, and there is every prospect that its volume in the present year will be largely in excess of that attained at any time in the past.

CROPS AND CENSUS.

Although there has been some damage to the crops in certain districts, the harvest has on the whole been abundant and it is believed that the returns to the husbandman will exceed those secured in any previous year.

The results of the census taken during the present year will be laid before you, so far as they have been tabulated. While the increase in population has not fulfilled all the sanguine expectations that had been formed, yet it has been substantial and encouraging.

REVENUES BEST YET.

You will be pleased to learn that the revenues for the current fiscal year have, up to the present, largely exceeded those during any similar period in the past, with every prospect that this increase will be maintained.

The advantages that would result from a wider exchange of products between the various countries of the Empire are undoubted, in view of the wonderful variety and extent of those productions, and negotiations have been opened for improved trade arrangements.

the case of small Western rural municipalities and school district issues. The safety of those school district securities is of quite a high class and yet for the chief reason that they are unknown, often yield as high as 6 per cent and sometimes over. These bonds are secured by a first lien, based on farm land at a rate of about 30 cents an acre, so that on land which is worth an average of over $10 an acre and readily sells at that price, there is no occasion to worry over the security. But the fact that they are often issues of only one, two or three thousand dollars makes it hard to get a good price on them unless the issue bears a high rate of interest. So the yield does not depend alone on the safety.

ARE YOUR HANDS CHAPPED?

Zam-Buk Will Cure Them.

The particular danger of chapped hands and cold cracks (apart altogether from the pain) is that the cold is likely to penetrate and set up inflammation, festering, or blood-poison. Directly the skin is broken by a cut, graze, or scratch, or chafed and cracked by the action of the cold winds and water, the one necessary precaution is to apply Zam-Buk freely.

The pure herbal juices from which Zam-Buk is prepared are so perfectly combined and refined that the immediate effect of these Zam-Buk dressings is soothing, antiseptic, and healing.

Mrs. O. M. Phoen, Neuchâtel, Alta., writes:—"I must tell you how pleased I am with Zam-Buk. My husband had an old frostbite on his foot for many years, and had tried almost every known remedy without any effect, but the first application of Zam-Buk seemed to help him so much that he persevered; and the sore is now cured. We would not be without Zam-Buk in the house."

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for piles, eczema, ulcers, abscesses, scalp sores, blood-poison, bad leg eruptions, etc. Its purely herbal composition makes it the ideal balm for babies and young children. All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk 50c. box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Try also Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet.

GOING HOME TO FIGHT.

Over Two Hundred Patriotic Italians Sailed From Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: Over two hundred Italians, most of them from the Montreal colony, sailed for their native land on Wednesday on the Canadian Northern Railway steamship Royal George. In the party, which crowded into the steerage were about twenty women and a few children. One who understood a little English said they expected to join the colors and engage in the war with Turkey, and from other sources it was learned that most of them belonged to the military reserves, and so were trained in military matters. Their cabins presented a very warlike aspect, for guns and rifles of every description and calibre were taken home with them.

General Reyes has been arrested at San Antonio, Texas, charged with a violation of neutrality laws by conspiring against the Mexican Government.

ANOTHER DREADNOUGHT.

Centurion is Designed to Counteract Torpedoes.

A despatch from London says: Great Britain's twenty-first battleship of the Dreadnought type, the Centurion, was launched at Devonport on Saturday. The claim is made that the newest addition to the navy is the best armored ship afloat. Mrs. Winston Churchill, wife of the new First Lord of the Admiralty, christened the vessel. The Centurion is a sister ship of the King George V., and has a displacement of 23,000 tons. The length is 555 feet, beam 89 feet and draught 27½ feet, while her engines are expected to develop 31,000 horsepower. A remarkable feature is the extraordinary number of watertight compartments, scores of which are intended to render the vessel unsinkable even if a section below the waterline is penetrated by a torpedo.

FIRE ON LUSITANIA.

Caused Small Sized Panic Among the Passengers.

A despatch from Queenstown says: An outbreak of fire occurred on the Cunard Liner Lusitania, which left Liverpool on Saturday bound for New York, via Queenstown. The fire was caused by a short circuit in the second cabin, soon after the steamship left the Mersey. It was located in one of the staterooms and almost immediately all the second cabin lights went out. A thick pungent smoke drove the passengers to the decks. The engines were stopped and the steamer Adriatic stood by to render help. This, however, proved unnecessary, as the crew succeeded in quickly extinguishing the flames.

Lieut. Lord Allister Graham was found guilty by the court-martial of allowing the Niobe to ground and sentenced to be reprimanded.

says: formal of the domin- the time n, the Senate Prince speech English much trench- use.

with the British West Indies and British Guiana, which should prove advantageous to those colonies as well as to this Dominion.

The importance of providing our country with better highways is manifest. A bill will be introduced for the purpose of enabling the Dominion to co-operate with the provinces in the accomplishment of this desirable object.

It is essential to recognize that, in a country possessing so great an area of fertile land as that with which this Dominion is happily endowed, the great basic industry is agriculture. My advisers are convinced that the time has come when greater aid and encouragement should be given to those who are engaged in the cultivation of the land. To this end a measure will be introduced under which it is hoped that there may be co-operation between the Dominion and the various provinces for the purpose of assisting and encouraging our farmers to secure the best results in production, and at the same time preserve the fertility of the soil.

OWNERSHIP OF ELEVATORS.

A measure will be introduced revising and consolidating the acts relating to the inspection of grain and providing the means by which the Government can secure, through a commission, the control and operation of the terminal elevators upon the great lakes.

A bill will be introduced to produce a permanent tariff commission, whose duty it shall be to ascertain by investigation and enquiry such information as will furnish a more stable and satisfactory basis for tariff legislation than has heretofore been available.

Bills will be laid before you with respect to the department of external affairs, the archives and other subjects.

The selection of the best route for the Hudson Bay Railway is engaging the attention of my advisers, and an announcement will be made to you of the result of their enquiry.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons: The accounts of the last year will be laid before you. The balance of the estimates for the current fiscal year, as well as the estimates for the coming year, will be submitted for your approval at an early date.

FINAL COMMENDATION.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate, Gentlemen of the House of Commons: I commend the subjects which I have mentioned to your best consideration and I trust that your deliberations under the blessing of Divine Providence may tend to the welfare and good Government of this Dominion.

DOMINION FIRE INSURANCE

Report of Superintendent Shows How Business Is Increasing.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The annual report of the superintendent of insurance on companies other than life shows that during the year 1909 the business of fire insurance in Canada was transacted by sixty companies. Of these twenty-five were Canadian, nineteen British and sixteen American. Cash received for premiums during the year in Canada amounted to $18,728,521 being greater than that received in 1909 by $1,676,037, and the amount paid for losses was $10,292,323, which is greater than that paid in 1909 by $1,645,567. The gross amount of policies, new and renewed, taken during the year by fire insurance companies was $1,817,055,685, which is greater by $237,070,818 than the amount taken in 1909. The premiums charged thereon amounted in 1910 to $24,084,290.40, being $2,360,663.15 greater than the amount charged the previous year. The rate of premiums (1.338) is somewhat lower than that of 1909 (1.431). The loss rate (54.96) is 4.24 per cent. greater than the loss rate of the previous year (50.72), and 8.67 per cent. less than the average loss rate (63.63) for the past twenty-five years.

butchers' cattle, choice cows, $2.25 to $2.50; butchers' cattle, medium, $3 to $3.50; butchers' cattle, bulls, $4 to $4.25; milkers, choice, each, $75; do., common and medium, each, $50 to $60; springers, $30 to $40. Sheep—Ewes, $3.50; bucks and culls, $3 to $3.25; lambs, $2.25. Hogs, f.o.b., $6 to $6.50. Calves, $3 to $10.

Toronto, Nov. 21.—Individual choice butcher cattle fetched $3.90 and $5 per cwt., but the prevailing quotations on good butcher cattle were $3.40 to $3.75, with common and medium cattle from $3.30 to $5. Cows were strong at $4.50 to $5.12 1/2 for good fat ones, and $2.75 to $4 for other grades. Export bulls were steady at $4.75 to $5.25. Cannons were very saleable at better prices even than usual, $2 to $3 per cwt. Stockers and feeders were traded freely at very good prices. Sheep and lambs were steady to firm at $3 to $3.95 and $5.10 to $5.85 respectively. The Hog Market was firm at $6.70 f.o.b.

MINERS RETURN TO WORK.

4,000 Turn Up at Mines after Eight Months of Idleness.

A despatch from Lethbridge, Alberta, says: The coal miners of District No. 18, who have been on strike for the past eight months, returned to work on Monday morning at all of the different camps in the district at 7 o'clock, when the big whistles called the men to work. Between 4,000 and 5,000 will be given work, and before the end of the week is over the number will be increased to between 6,000 and 7,000.

Which is Your Choice ?

Sloppy, leaky wooden troughs, or clean, durable Concrete ?

Wooden drinking troughs are about as reliable as the weather.

They are short-lived and require replacing every few years—not to mention continual patching to keep them in repair.

The best of wood cannot withstand, for long, constant dampness and soaking. Its tendency to rapid decay soon shows itself in leaks and stagnant pools of water around trough.

Contrast with this the durability, cleanliness and well-ordered appearance of Concrete.

That outside influence was brought to bear to end the Hebert case, resulting in the withdrawal of Eugene Hebert's defence against his wife's opposition to the dissolution of their marriage under the Ne Temere, was declared by those on the inside of the now famous case. Other reasons than the shortage of finances were, they affirm more powerful in bringing about the abrupt termination of the case. "If the Roman Catholic Church had thought their position tenable under the Ne Temere decree, money would have been forthcoming to fight this case in the privy council," declared Arnold Wainwright, counsel for Mrs. Hebert, who believed the opposition was satisfied with a supreme court judgment in their favor rather than face the possibility of an adverse decision in a higher court. Archbishop Bruchesi was to have been called as a witness, but at his palace the attendants absolutely declined to discuss the matter. At Canon Roy's home the same silence was observed. M. S. MADOLE.

Obituary.

Emma Bristol, beloved wife of Eger-ton R. Shorey, passed from earth to rest, and her heavenly reward, suddenly at her home in North Toronto, on Sunday evening, October 15th, 1911. She gave her heart and life to her Saviour when quite young, and was a faithful Christian to the end, she being of the Methodist Church about fifty-five years. Deceased was born in South Fredericksburg, Lennox County on April 5th, 1841. She was the daughter of John W. and Catherine Bristol. She leaves to mourn her departure, her sorrowing husband, to whom she was married on Sept. 18th, 1860, two sons, Amos B. and Nellis C., of Toronto; three daughters, Mrs. Hurch-cliff, of North Toronto; Misses Bertha and May, at home; two brothers and one sister.

Mr. John A. Fraser, one of Napanee's well known citizens, passed away at his home on Bridge street on Tuesday after an illness of seven weeks. A couple of weeks ago he went to Toronto to have an operation performed but returned sick unto death. For a number of years he carried on a dry goods business in Napanee, Tamworth and other places, but during the past few years had lived a retired life. The funeral took place from his late residence on Thursday afternoon. Besides his widow deceased leaves one son, Arthur, and three daughters, all married.

was satisfied with a supreme court judgment in their favor rather than face the possibility of an adverse decision in a higher court. Archbishop Bruchesi was to have been called as a witness, but at his palace the attendants absolutely declined to discuss the matter. At Canon Roy's home the same silence was observed. Nothing has yet been started on the Protestant's behalf to carry the case further. Several leading Protestants have advanced strongly the belief that it should go to a higher court, but no work has been done to organize the means to carry it.

CASTORIA

The Lyceum Players.

Will open their engagement of three nights, beginning Monday, Nov. 28th, and 29th, in the beautiful comedy drama, "Lena Rivers," a dramatization of the novel, Lena Rivers, by Mary J. Holmes. This beautiful southern romance has a strong plot, a unique heart interest and the most wholesome and natural comedy running through it ever seen in a place of this kind. You will laugh until you cry. On Tuesday night, the Lyceum players will present an exceptionally strong play entitled "The end of the Trail." The scenes are laid in the far north. It deals with the subject of hereditary sin, like father like son, like mother like daughter. There is a beautiful heart interest, some unctious comedy, and teaches a good moral. This play has created a sensation wherever produced and is one you can not afford to miss. Wednesday night the Lyceum players present Jesse James, the Missouri out-law. You may have seen Jesse James, but never the correct life story of Jesse James as the Lyceum players control the only accurate version written especially for them by Jesse James, son of the out-law. There is not a dead moment during any of the performances of the Lyceum players. Between acts you will see the class of vaudeville that you pay fifty cents for orchestra seats to see in the cities, including the Great Rolland, the Mysterious Who. Plan opens Saturday morning at Jessop's drug store. Popular prices, 15, 25 and 35c.

Skates and Hockey Sticks, all the best and new patterns. Every skate as represented, the hockey sticks, that stand for every player. See them at BOYLE & SON.

High Court.

Bowen vs Vernon et al : and, Vernon vs Bowen—The two actions were consolidated for the purpose of being tried together and occupied a day and a half of the court.

Judgement in the action, Bowen vs Vernon as follows: Let Judgement be entered after 30 days, declaring that the will executed on the 21st, August, 1908, and bearing date 21st, August, 1905, is the last will and testament of James Hogle Brown, deceased, and entitled to probate as such. Costs of all parties out of the estate. J. L. Whitney, K. C., and T. B. German for plaintiff, Mr. E. Douglas Armour, K. C., G. F. Rutman, K. C., and W. A. Grange for defendants.

Judgement as follows in Vernon vs Bowen. After 30 days let judgement be entered dismissing this action with costs.

As against Amelia H. Thompson, Jno. Wood Thompson, and R. B. Thompson with their costs His Lordship also directs that Judgement be entered dismissing this action with costs at the expiration of 30 days and directs that the injunction granted be continued in the meantime. The Lis pendens registered against the lands of Amelia H. Thompson, Jno. Wood Thompson and R. B. Thompson be discharged. E. Douglas Armour, K. C., and G. F. Rutman, K. C. for plaintiff. J. L. THE COUNCIL MEETING

Council Chamber,
November 20th, 1911.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor A. S. Kimmerly in the chair.

Present—Reeve Alexander, and Councillors Meng, Stevens, Waller, Dickinson, Steacy and Denison.

The minutes of the last regular and special sessions were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From the Napanee Fire Brigade asking for their annual reimbursement, namely $300.

Ordered paid.

From the Lennox and Addington Teachers Association tendering to the council the thanks of the Association for the use of the Town Hall on Thursday evening, October 12th. Fyld.

From Mrs. Dr. G. C. T. Ward, asking, on behalf of the Ladies Musical Club, for the use of the town hall for the coming season on the same terms as last year.

Moved by Coun. Stevens, seconded by Coun. Denison, that the request be granted, during the life of this council, the applicants to pay for cost of light used and caretaking. Carried.

From the Napanee Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association, asking for the use of the town hall, on January 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 5th, 1912, the dates for their annual show, also that the usual grant be made the Association. Granted.

The following letter addressed to Mayor A. S. Kimmerly, and dated the 13th day of November, 1911, was read:

"Take notice that on Friday, the 10th day of November, A. D., 1911, about 6.30 p. m., I, Emma J. Hunter, wife of Mr. W. H. Hunter, of the Town of Napanee, met with an accident and thereby sustained personal injury, on West street, in the Municipality of the Town of Napanee, and which accident was caused by the defective state of the sidewalk, on the east side of said street, at the south east corner of Mill and West streets, in that the same was without a plank, leaving an opening into which I, the said Emma J. Hunter, stepped and was thrown, breaking my left shoulder and receiving other bodily injuries.

EMMA J. HUNTER.

W. H. HUNTER.

Witness—Stella Martin.

On motion Mayor A. S. Kimmerly and Coun. Denison were given authority to interview Mrs. Hunter and endeavour to find out the amount of damage claimed and report to the council.

The Streets Committee reported that the Treasurer had given him a list of parties owing the town for cement walks, etc., in 1906-7-8.

Moved by Coun. Waller, seconded by Coun. Meng, that the Street Commissioner give each one of these parties a personal notice of their account, and if not paid before Dec. 1st, the accounts be placed in the courts for collection. Carried.

Coun. Meng, chairman of Fire, Water and Light, reported that the lights in the Harvey Warner Park had been turned off for the winter, also that the lights in the town clock were being taken care of by Mrs. Webster. Coun. Meng reported that an automatic clock could be purchased for about $25 which would shut off and turn on the lights at a fixed time. He suggested that probably this would be a profitable investment.

Moved by Coun. Ming, seconded by Coun. Stevens, that the Fire, Water and Light Committee bring in a report at the next session of council, as to the cost of a time clock and installation of same in post office clock. Carried.

Coun. Denison reported that Mr. C. Warner had informed him that the roof on the Public Library was leaking badly.

Referred to the Town Property to investigate and report, and, if possible

Vernon v s. Bowen.

The two High Court actions consolidated for trial, in the above estate were disposed of at the Assizes held at the Town of Napanee on the 20th and 21st inst.

The first action was entered by Mr. G. F. Rutnan acting for Ahmeda Melissa Vernon, (a niece of the deceased) in behalf of herself and other heirs and next of kin of said James Hogle Brown and was to set aside the will, which action was subsequently transferred to the High Court of Justice. In this action Mr. T. B. German acted for the Executor, Charles Willett Bowen, and Messrs. Herrington, Warner and Grange appeared for Catharine Demorest.

The second action was a High Court action entered by Mr. G. F. Rutnan acting for Ahmeda M. Vernon and others, to set aside certain gifts of real and personal estate to various parties and for an injunction to restrain the donees from handling any of the estate moneys or property. In this action Messrs. Herrington, Warner and Grange acted for Charles Willett Bowen and others and Mr. T. B. German acted for Catharine Demorest and others.

The result of the said trial was that the will was sustained under the first action in which action the costs are to be paid out of the estate and the second action was dismissed with costs to the estate. In both actions a stay of thirty days was allowed.

Killed at Fredericksburg.

Mrs. Dr. Switzer, a respected resident of Napanee was killed at Fredericksburg station on Friday afternoon last. Mrs. Switzer was going to Fredericksburg to visit relatives, and as the mail train was late the fast train came in first and she took this train in error and when the train was passing Fredericksburg station without stopping she tried to get off the train, and dropped into a small stream alongside the track. The train was running about 50 miles an hour and none of the train crew observed her attempt to get off. She was discovered shortly after by people living near the track, who supposed a parcel had been thrown off and were horrified to discover the body of a woman in the creek. The body was taken to her brother's house and the funeral took place on Sunday.
